PHILLIPS ACADEMY
ANDOVER, MASSACHUSETTS

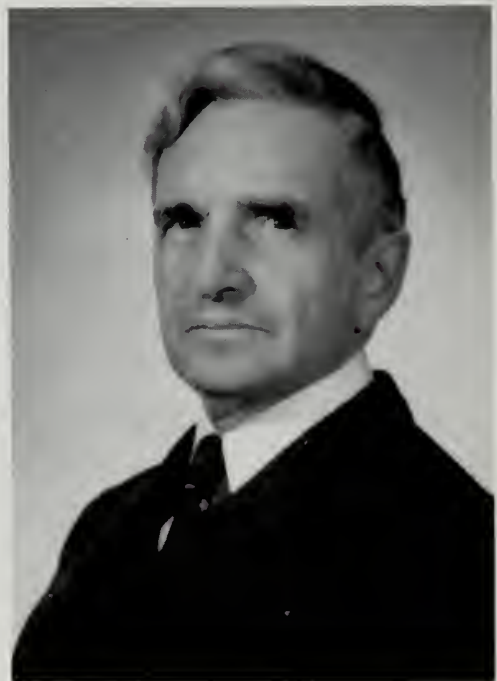

GEORGE FRANKLIN FRENCH

Mr. French was appointed to the staff of the school in 1907, and has been head of the French Department since 1934. He is himself a graduate of Phillips Academy, having received his diploma in 1897, and has consequently been very active in Alumni circles as Treasurer of the Alumni Association. For many years he has been head of the Faculty Committee for Graduation, and has arranged the Commencement exercises. During his years of teaching French his students have found him to be pleasant and understanding, at the same time maintaining a high quality of instruction. We should like to thank him now, on behalf of ourselves and all the students he has helped in former years.

Retiring

ROY EVERETT SPENCER

Mr. Spencer was appointed to the faculty in 1917, and has remained a member of the English department ever since that time. He has always taught the younger boys, mostly the Lovers and Juniors. Throughout his years at P. A., he has been both a competent and a sympathetic teacher. He is retiring after a career of which he may well be proud. Our thanks to him for all he has contributed to Phillips Academy.

Dedication

DEAN LESTER E. LYNDE

The oldest member of the faculty in point of service, Dean Lynde was appointed in the fall of 1901. He was a mathematics teacher of some distinction, when under Dr. Stearns he changed to the administrative side of the school as Headmaster's assistant. Dr. Fuess appointed Mr. Lynde to his present position of dean when he became Headmaster in 1933. Since then he has had charge of the curriculum. As Dr. Fuess's "second in command" he has coordinated the various instructional fields. We should like to dedicate this POT POURRI to him at his retirement to express our gratitude to him for his many years of faithful service to Phillips Academy.

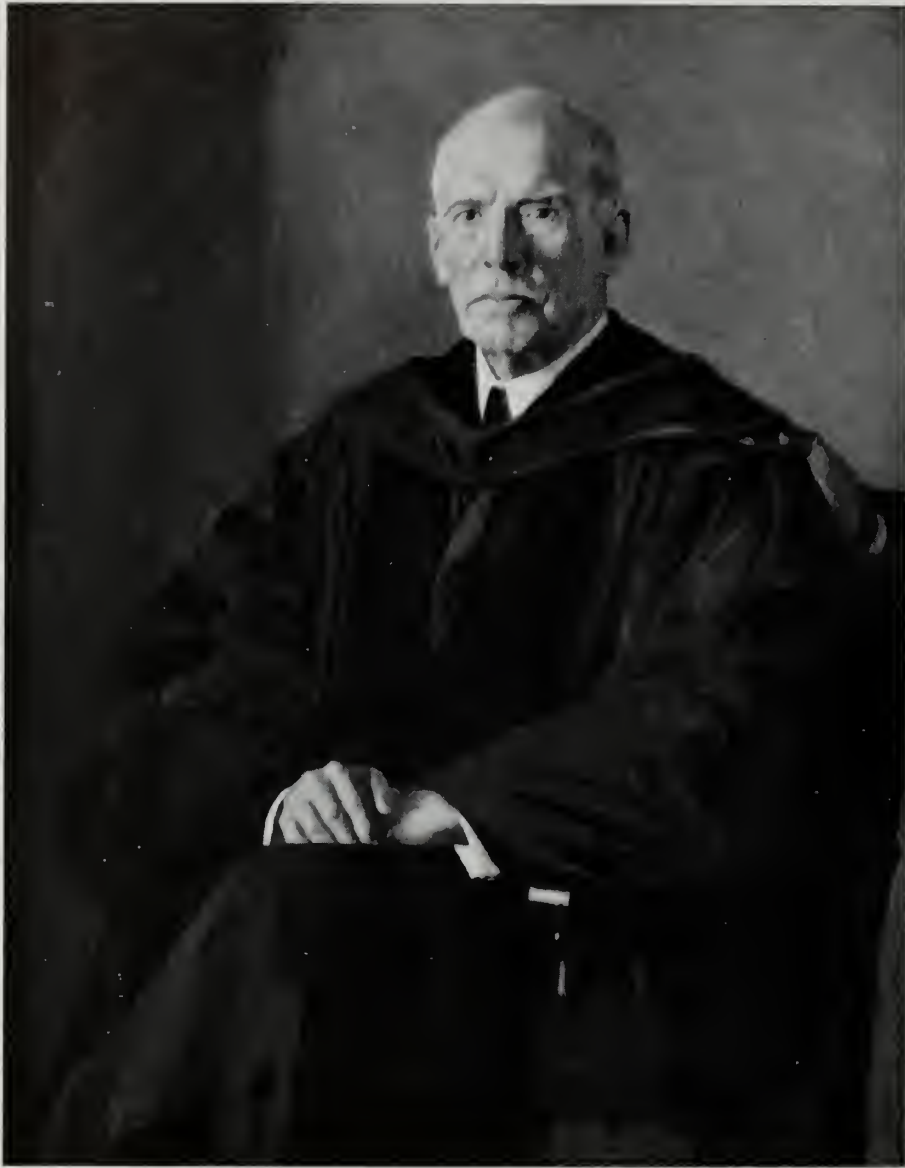

School Spirit

Being a part of the student body of Phillips Academy is a great privilege at any time, but it is especially so when a living school spirit, unexpected and inexplicable, pervades the atmosphere and binds the 700 students together by some mysterious tie. This year, in spite of the imminence for most of us of entry into one of the services, in spite of the monumental forces which have struggled noisily around us for the past few years, there has appeared within the school this strange bond, which, petty differences notwithstanding, has made the Class of '44 an outstanding one. One felt the force of this school spirit on the trip to Exeter last fall, with the band leading a mile-long line of raucous enthusiasts up into the enemy's citadel, and also on the dreary trip home, when despite our defeat there was little sign of bitterness or despondency. Again on the evening of our victory in the War Bond Contest, the intangible, yet very real bond among us was felt. The chapel bell announcing our victory woke the whole campus, until the Royal Blue was echoing all the way from the Senior Quadrangle to Williams Hall. On many occasions throughout the year our spirit has manifested itself, although, caught in the mad whirlwind of events spiraling toward graduation and the consequent uncertainties, few of us have stopped to realize how much we take it for granted. For that is the essence of school spirit, confident dependence on your fellows without fear of being let down.

No one can explain why this spirit has been given in such large measure to the Class of '44, but it has and we can be thankful for it. Its constructive force has kept us from degeneration under the pressure of events. It is typical of the student body that we do take such things for granted and shy away from discussing them, but here in THE POT POURRI, our last accomplishment as an undergraduate class, is the proper place to note it in passing so that later in life we may look back and remember it.

In Memoriam

ALFRED LAWRENCE RIPLEY '73, A.M., LL.D.

The passing of Mr. Alfred Lawrence Ripley on October 13, 1943, at the age of 84, was deeply mourned by all concerned with Phillips Academy. Mr. Ripley graduated from Andover in 1873. He was elected to the Board of Trustees in 1902 and retired only a few months before his death. He was President of the Board prior to the election of Mr. Henry L. Stimson to that office. For over forty years he had served not only the school, but his community extremely well. Concerning Mr. Ripley, Dr. Fuess said: "He had a profound influence over the policies of Phillips Academy during the period in which he served both as member and President of the Board of Trustees."

Junior Year

In September 1940 we were not really scared, but everything about Andover Hill seemed very big and very new; we felt insignificant and vulnerable, and were quite justified in that feeling. It did not take us long, however, to get acquainted with our classmates from Texas and Oregon and Colorado and practically every other one of the forty-eight states. We found comfort and security in the numbers of our new friends and shortly we were all confirmed "wise preps."

Recovering from the initial rush of schedule making and Prepping, we turned our energies to Mr. Di Clementi's Junior Athletics. It was soon apparent that among us were many who would shortly be establishing themselves on the varsity squads.

The Will Hall-Rockwell Game was well played by both sides. The Rockwell boys won, but it was a closely contested battle. The Will Hall-Rockwell conflict was renewed in the Winter Term with a gigantic snow ball fight, started by an assault on Rockwell by the Will Hall contingent. The battle raged for an entire day with attacks and counter-attacks causing numerous casualties on both sides; the outcome is still debated. In the Spring Term intra-class hostilities ceased and the rival factions combined to field an excellent baseball team, which in the course of its season won several outside games.

While our personal interests were turned to J. A. teams and sports, the varsity squads were compiling a rather mediocre Exeter record. A game but outclassed football team, under the leadership of Jack Fisher took a 20-2 defeat; Captain Don Boynton's soccer team went down 1-0. The basketball and wrestling teams also failed to beat the Red and Gray, but the string of losses was broken by good wins in both hockey and swimming. The baseball team was also unsuccessful, so the victory of the track team, captained by Fisher and Kelsey, turned out to be our only major win over Exeter. We had waited long for the victory celebration that followed, but we enjoyed that celebration no less because of the wait.

We recall other things from our Prep year: the flu epidemic, which caused the evacuation of Rockwell for use as a temporary infirmary, and the resulting three weeks of riotous living in Peabody House; the after-hours commando attack on the Lower Cottages by a Rockwell House expeditionary force; the Dramatic Club's "Room Service"; the fellows who are gone now: Dave Dines, Andy Cushing, Mitch Fish. But we remember most of all how we planned to return the next fall not as Preps and chicks from the "incubator," but as old men, as real P. A. men.

Lower Year

Having successfully completed our first year, we, the Seniors of 1944, returned to the Hill as Lower Middlers, hoping to take a more active part in school life. Self-consciously we strutted about the campus giving advice to the lowly Preps, when suddenly our dreams were shattered by a shout, "Hey, Prep! Yes I mean you!" and we were made to realize what a small part of the school we really were.

On Alumni Day in October, we were all greatly impressed with the appearance at Assembly of Col. Stimson, Secretary of War. Later in the fall we all travelled to Exeter and saw our first Andover-Exeter football victory as the team, led by Ken Keuffel, completed an undefeated season. Jim Ryley, whom few of us knew then, but many were to know well later on, coached his team to a well-deserved victory in soccer. In December we were shocked by the news of Pearl Harbor, but few of us then realized the full significance it was to have for us and our friends.

Despite wonderful holidays at home, we were glad to get back and were eagerly anticipating the activities of the Winter Term. The Term sped by quickly, but not until the basketball team, with the help of our own Mort Bishop, had won a sensational victory over a previously undefeated Red and Gray. Those few of us who were going to the Prom were disappointed when an epidemic of measles broke out, but all was forgiven when two days were added to our Spring vacation.

Track and baseball held the most interest for us in the Spring Term. In June Exeter invaded the Hill with a powerful nine. After 14 innings of clean baseball, Doug Sturges, our contribution to the team, batted in the winning run, to give Andover a thrilling 2-1 victory. The following Wednesday many of us journeyed to New Hampshire to see our track team get nipped out 64-62, with Exeter sweeping the last event, the broad-jump. Besides these exciting athletic events, the entire school witnessed a remarkable performance of Pinafore by the combined Abbot and Andover musical clubs. Another treat was a talk by a man we had all heard so much about, the late William Lyon Phelps.

The many of us who took part in the historic mud-fight on the old campus will never forget it. Some of us stayed after exams for the Spring Prom. Looking back on it all of us were very well satisfied with the results of our Lower Year when we left. We were looking forward ardently to becoming upper-classmen, with all the new privileges that involves, the next year. We felt that at last we would gain positions of more importance in school life, and expected to accomplish big things in the following year.

Upper Year

In the Fall of 1942 we returned to the Hill conscious of the privileges and responsibilities of upper-classmen. We slyly observed prepping methods, for we knew that in a year's time we were to be top men of the school. Aside from a few faculty vacancies and various other minor war-time adjustments, the old school was the same.

Defeated and tied by the Red and Gray in soccer, our powerful eleven, led by Dick "Do-it-again" Duden avenged the soccer stalemate 12-0. The day of the Andover-Exeter football game was an eventful one, the first in our history when Exeter had spent the whole day en masse on the Hill—and without a casualty!

The entire school was required to take rigorous body building exercises, following the custom of the previous summer, and we were subjected at intervals to the all-significant step test. At Thanksgiving, due to wartime travel difficulties, the student body was kept on the Hill and given a day of leisure with movies the night before. This, together with the elimination of seconds in the beanery and the institution of "K. P." as punishment for unmade beds made us all more conscious of the war.

Through the dreary winter months we dutifully hibernated in a burrow of books. The long hard winter took its toll in colds and for a short time the school was bothered with a minor epidemic of measles and mumps. Although we were defeated by Exeter in track, wrestling, and fencing, we showed our strength by trouncing our friends from New Hampshire in basketball, hockey, and swimming. The plans for a winter Prom were discouraged as an extravagant expense in wartime. As March came in like a lion, we left for home, happily anticipating three weeks of glorious "rest."

With the coming of Spring, life on the Hill was resumed. The body building program, discontinued during the Winter Term, was started up again. The greater part of the student body accompanied the baseball team to Exeter to witness our 7-0 triumph, but later the Exonians reaped vengeance in track, tennis and lacrosse. The Abbot-Andover production of The Mikado was given with much hilarious success. About this time, we saw the Seniors busy and worried about V-12 and V-5 papers and we realized that soon they would be off to camps, colleges, and fronts far from our reach. Before we could account for fleeing time, June was here with its final week of prize day, Prom, and Graduation. Many stayed long enough to go to the successful Prom and to say goodbye to Senior friends, many never to be seen again.

Senior Year

NEALE AND REISLER
Like Morison and Commager

When the 1943 Fall Term opened, the Senior Class returned to a Phillips Academy which for a year and a half had been geared for war. The boys who had been to Summer School were a full term ahead of the rest of us and were already in the swing of their Senior year. It was hard at first to get used to the fact that over thirty members of the class would leave in February to go into the various branches of the armed forces. The death of Mrs. Fuess during the summer was felt deeply by all who knew her, and all old boys missed her presence at various school functions. Thus it was that the 167th year began at old P. A.

The fall athletic season was hindered by the War in that many of the older athletes had left for the services. The football team experienced many ups and downs during the season. The team was younger and greener than in previous years, but at times it rose to great heights, as in the Maine game, and the second Tufts game. On November 15, the whole school traveled to Exeter to see one of the most exciting games in years. However the favored Blue went down to defeat by a 12-6 margin. The soccer team was held to a 0-0 tie in a muddy game up at Exeter. But in a second meeting, the Red and Gray downed P. A.'s booters 1-0.

During the fall two very distinguished speakers addressed the school in morning assembly. They were former ambassador Dr. Joseph E. Grew and Captain Abercrombie of the United States Navy. Formal entertainment for the fall was highlighted by the Trapp Family concert.

The school returned from Christmas vacation for an eventful Winter Term. For the accelerating Seniors it was the last on the Hill. The athletic teams lost no time in opening their respective schedules. The basketball team was the most successful team of the winter months, winning all but three of its games and soundly defeating Exeter twice. The hockey team also beat the Red and Gray on New Hampshire ice. Swimming and wrestling had only mediocre seasons, both going down to defeat at the hands of Exeter. The trackmen split two meets with the Red and Gray, winning the second one here by a comfortable margin.

One victory over Exeter gave the school a feeling of real pride, as the United States Government was the real winner to the tune of over forty thousand dollars. This was the Bond Drive conducted by the newspapers of the respective schools. We raised a total of $22,110 to top Exeter by a scant $800.

For the first time in the history of the school there was a mid-winter graduation. And for the first time in our four years at Andover, there was a winter Prom, which made the graduation as nearly like the normal one in June as possible amid winter's blasts.

The student body was virtually snowed under with top-notch entertainment for the Winter Term. Dorothy Thompson, Angna Enters, the American String Quartet, and Ruth Posselt headed the schedule of programs which filled George Washington Hall to capacity Friday night after Friday night. Also the Student Council held a Tea Dance, which was highly successful both financially and otherwise, as those held during the Fall had been.

The Navy V-12 and V-5 programs signed up many boys during the winter, as did the Army Air Corps Cadet Program. The examinations made us all feel once more that college life as our predecessors had known it was still something a long way off. We became more grateful than ever that life at Andover comes closer to that college life than most prep schools do.

Bright, sunny days greeted us upon our final return to P. A.'s campus and the buds were beginning to come into the open. The general attitude of the Senior Class changed to take on a more serious tone, for this last term was the final push; for many it was the climax of four years of effort.

The first bit of news the school received came from Dr. Fuess when he announced the plans for a Student Union Building designed to take the place of the Fraternity houses and the Commons room and to provide offices and other facilities for many student activities, in addition to containing the universally desired milk bar and other improvements.

The athletic outlook for the Spring is indeed encouraging. Baseball, even though few letter men returned, appears to have a strong team. The Lacrosse team, with almost a complete squad returning, looks forward to the first victory in this sport over Exeter in more than a decade. Track seems headed for a successful season. The Prep School Meet with Gil Dodds running the mile promises to be a very important event. Tennis prospects also are good.

The Pirates of Penzance, a combined P. A. and Abbot production, ranks with the two former productions of Gilbert and Sullivan operettas as an outstanding success. The spring also brought a softball league among the Seniors and Uppers. Although the Seniors are heavily favored to win, the outcome was still uncertain at the time of going to press.

The sudden death of Mr. Schubert was a shock to us all, and most of the class attended his funeral to pay their last respects.

Preparations for Graduation began almost as soon as we returned to the Hill in April. Amid the bustle of preparations, the only definite thing we can say about our future is that we hope to carry on with the same spirit we have found here on Andover Hill.

W. STEVENS

This has been a very active year on the part of the Student Council. More than average student interest was further stimulated by the Council's having charge of the Saturday morning assemblies. School problems were thus brought to the attention of the entire student body by one of its members.

The open meetings of the Council, held in the Winter and Spring Terms, had a similar effect. Anyone could attend and ask questions of Council members. Subjects brought up were investigated by the Council and a report was made in Assembly or at the next open meeting.

Proctoring in the Lower Middle dining hall brought a considerable improvement in conditions there. Two Senior members of the Council helped maintain order at the Movies on Saturday night. The Council frequently met with Mr. Cook to help him choose movies that would be most enjoyed by the majority of students.

In supporting the War Bond Drive the Council sold thousands of dollars worth of stamps at the Commons and before the movies. The Tea dances were all successful and profits were used towards the two Proms held at the ends of the Winter and Spring Terms. This year's Council set a standard of interest and effective activity which marks the beginning of increased student participation in the affairs of the school. Next year's Council will come nearer to that goal by building on the work of this year's.

Advisory Board

The general purpose of the Advisory Board is to improve cooperation and understanding between students and the coaching staff, and to help and advise the Athletic Department in matters having to do with the student body. The Board consists of the captains and managers of football, track, and baseball, and the Undergraduate Treasurer, who is appointed by the Board. This year, these positions were held in football by Jim Hudner and Ted Heckel; in track by Bob Hatch, Jim Hudner, and Bob Lawlor (co-captains), and John Shepard; and in baseball by Art Moher and Bill Woodrow. Joe Reisler was Undergraduate Treasurer.

Following the recommendations of the various coaches and captains, the Advisory Board awards all athletic letters and insignia. The appointment of cheerleaders, the P. A. Police, and the Open Door committee is another duty of the Board. The job of the P. A. Police is to maintain order at athletic contests and other school functions. The Open Door serves as a welcoming committee for visiting athletic teams and other guests of the school, acting as their guides on the campus and in the Commons, and assisting them in any way that may be necessary. Each of these organizations has done excellent work this year and deserves praise for its accomplishments.

Another function of the Advisory Board is the election of assistant managers for the varsity sports. A list of candidates for these positions is compiled by the Undergraduate Treasurer and then voted on by the Board. Meetings of the Board are held at the beginning and end of each term, and at any other time if athletic matters come up which must be considered.

Mr. Shepard commends highly the members of the Board for the excellent way in which they have performed their duties.

Society of Inquiry

PRESIDENT TED HECKEL
Waiting for Dorothy Thompson?

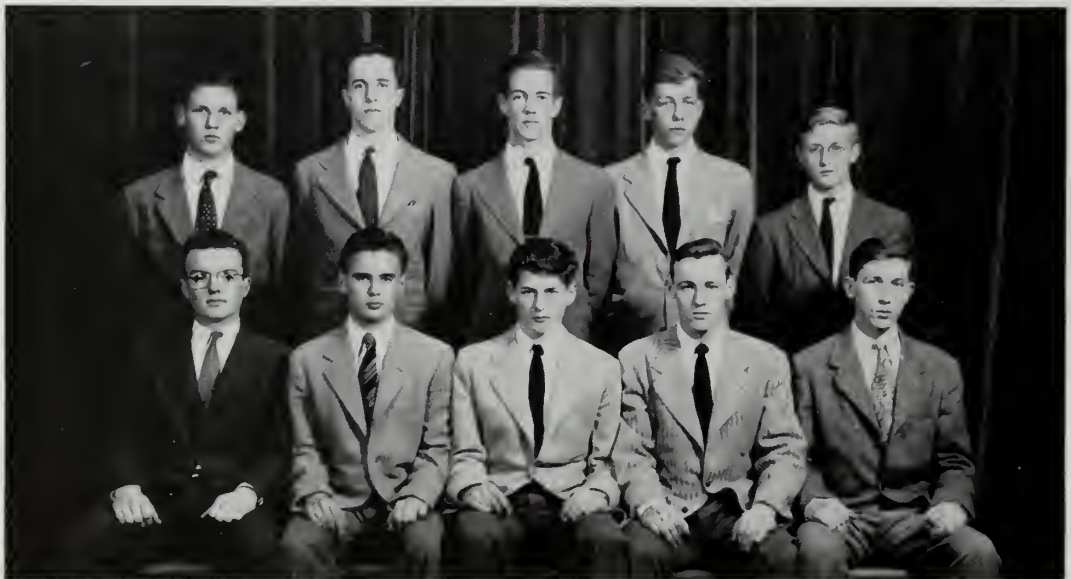

The aim of the Society of Inquiry is to approach religion in a broad and vital way. It is a student organization, relying for leadership not on a faculty group but on an undergraduate board. The S. of I.

this year was led by Ted Heckel, President; Whitney Stevens, Vice-President; and Reynolds Farrington, Treasurer.

Among the usual functions of the society, the annual Charities Drive, with 100% student backing, this year raised $4300, for distribution among charitable organizations. Two scholarships were given, and a number of lecturers and notables were presented to the student body.

The most significant innovation was the acceptance of volunteers, from the Upper Middle Class, to be elected to the board if their interest in the society merited it. On April 23 a convention of delegates from Exeter, Milton, Groton, St. Paul's, and Thayer met with Andover to discuss racial and postwar problems.

For the complete success of the S. of I.'s year, credit is due to Mr. Baldwin, for his advice and cooperation, and to all the members of the retiring board.

Capably led by Stan Dickey and "Bing" Abbot and spurred on by Messrs. Baldwin and Cory, Circle A enjoyed a vigorous year. Collecting magazines and old clothes for charities was followed by a series of informal addresses by speakers in various fields of social work.

Undeterred by accumulated cobwebs and rubble, several members took part in the renovation of a long-disused grocery store in Ballardvale. The building has now taken an important place in the community as a much needed recreation center for the village youth.

The Andover Guild also received its usual help from Circle A. Two members, Browning and Isham, supervised bowling, basketball, and boxing every Wednesday, while Coolidge, Baty, and others collected used records. During the Winter Term the annual party for the Guild children was held, including tricks by Magician Mayo, movies, and refreshments. Master of Ceremonies Follansbee conducted the festivities with customary high spirits, and the party was considered one of the high points of a successful year.

The one hundred nineteenth year of the Philomathean Society has been outstanding for the great increase in membership and interest. Under the Fall Term officers, President Tom McGowan, Vice-President Charlie O'Brien, Secretary Don Sterling, and Treasurer Heath Allen, the meetings were devoted to debates on topics of current interest, such as foreign relations and the eighteen-year voting age. After each debate there was a discussion period in which any member could join, an experiment that proved very successful. During the term a six-man judging panel was chosen to make the weekly decisions, and the chairman usually gave a brief criticism of each debate to improve technique. The term ended with a banquet at the Andover Inn which was attended by over fifty members of the Society. Mr. Basford was the guest speaker, and several of the members gave amusing after-dinner speeches. This marked the last appearance of Vice-President O'Brien, who left to join the Navy.

The Winter Term saw a greater variety of topics, as a committee was established to arrange them on varied subjects and well in advance so debaters could have ample time to prepare their speeches. The committee also took charge of publicity, arranging an exhibit in the library for one debate, and putting up posters for many others. During the term another election was held; Tom McGowan was reelected President, Heath Allen chosen Vice-President, Austin Smith, Secretary, and Don Sterling, Treasurer. The Varsity Debating Team had one encounter, defeating Middlesex Academy by a unanimous decision. Due to wartime difficulties, no other debates could be arranged until the Spring Term when a debate with Exeter, and another with Bradford Junior College were tentatively scheduled, with the officers as the team. The Winter Term also saw the acceptance of a long needed seal. The term ended with membership well over sixty, the highest in several years.

In the Spring Term P. A. won the Bradford debate by audience decision. The Robinson Prize and Exeter debates were not held in time for publication of the results. Next year's elections also came too late. However, the year has been the most successful in a long time. The officers have done a good job of organization and have helped revive student interest. Debates such as Chittick versus Sterling on the question of a fourth term found very sizable audiences. Mr. McCarthy's help in improving debating technique was especially appreciated by the members of Philo. The success of this year's program makes the future look very bright. Even more advances are expected next year.

This year, with a nucleus of old men to support it, the Glee Club undertook a strenuous program, including three performances of Gabriel Fauré's "Requiem," and the annual Gilbert and Sullivan, which was The Pirates of Penzance this year. Dr. Pfatteicher, for over thirty years Director of the Music Department, again produced an organization worthy of merit. Strength in the tenor sections, which is unusual for an age at which the voice is changing, gave the chorus a well-rounded volume, which was not as predominantly bass as heretofore.

The enrollment in the Glee Club speaks well for its success. At the season's height, there were well over one hundred boys attending rehearsals regularly. The number never dropped below eighty. This marked enthusiasm was so strongly felt that the system of giving out half-cuts for absence was in large measure done away with.

The Glee Club's repertoire was large and varied. Two full-scale works were performed in addition to the Fauré "Requiem." J. S. Bach was represented by the cantata "Sleepers Wake," and "Spring" from the oratorio "The Creation" was chosen from the works of Haydn. Shorter works were Georg Friedrich Handel's "Then Round About Thy Starry Throne" and "Lift Up Your Heads, O Ye Gates," the latter from "The Messiah." Lighter works included were Schubert's "Hark, Hark, The Lark at Heaven's Gate Sings," "Once I Loved a Maiden Fair," and two choruses from the "Beggar's Opera."

The orchestra assumed its customary role, playing at all the Glee Club concerts. This year, a great cooperative effort was reached when its strings and trumpets accompanied the Glee Club in the Bach cantata "Sleepers Wake."

The Choir comprised of Glee Club members took a prominent part in every church service, singing an anthem every other week on the average. At Christmas, they provided special singing, which included a wide choice of carols. At the Easter service, they sang "This Joyful Eastertide," an Easter carol. "Rejoice! Rejoice in the Lord all ye People" was rendered as the anthem. Due to the large enrollment in the Glee Club, a seat in the Choir was much in demand. Sharp competition certainly improved the standard of the singing.

Of the faculty members who are connected with the Glee Club, Dr. Pfatteicher is, by far, the most dominant. With confidence in its ability he gave the Glee Club much of his time and all of his energy in order that each concert might be a success. Mr. Fillmore deserves much credit for his continued faithfulness as accompanist and for holding his own "Requiem" rehearsals. Dr. Firth, although he never appeared with the Glee Club, spent many hours in laborious rehearsal for The Pirates. Mr. Cobb of the Social Functions Committee aided Ben Brewster in launching the several dances. To both of these men a vote of thanks is due.

FRIDAY EVENING REHEARSAL
"Hallelujah!"

PRESIDENT BEN BREWSTER
...and daughters

For the students, Ben Brewster proved himself an able leader and a skillful organizer. Playing the role of the Major-General in The Pirates, he nevertheless had time to manage the social functions of the Glee Club. Woodie Stockwell as Treasurer handled the difficult job of collecting money with good humor and tact. The 8-in-1 Octet sang for the school and the Glee Club on numerous occasions. Solo work for Bass was divided between Frank Magee, who left in March, and Pete Stevens, who sang solos in the "Requiem," "Sleepers Wake," and "Spring." Tenor parts in the latter two were taken by Fred Pratt.

The greatest single Glee Club effort was the performance of Fauré's "Requiem" with the Walnut Hill and Dana Hall schools. The work is over seventy pages long and takes thirty-five minutes to perform. It is divided into the parts of the Ordinary of the Mass. Most of the music is for chorus, but there are three solos, one for Soprano, the other two for Baritone.

About the concerts themselves, there is little to add except that all were very successful because everyone had a lot of fun. But in addition, the Glee Club was able to set a standard of excellence this year which will be difficult to surpass.

Pirates of Penzance

Following the tradition set two years ago with H.M.S. Pinafore, and continued last year with the Mikado, the Pirates of Penzance was presented on the G. W. H. stage on April 21 and 22. Abbot and Andover again combined glee clubs and directors to produce a colorful and convincing production. Excerpts were broadcast on the Phillips Academy Hour, as an added touch.

Direction of the singing was handled by Dr. Pfatteicher of Andover and Mr. Howe of Abbot; the staging was directed by Mr. Cochran and Dr. Grew of P. A. and Miss Rath of Abbot. Starring for the third successive year was Alva Houston, this year as Mabel, the daughter of Major-General Stanley, portrayed by Ben Brewster. Pamela Clark was Ruth, pirate maid; Fred Pratt played Frederick, apprentice to the Pirate King, Peter Stevens. Harry Reid was the Sergeant of Police; Dave Thaw played Samuel, lieutenant of the King; and Betty Colson, Janet Hitchcock, and Gretchen Fuller took small parts.

The radio broadcast revealed several weaknesses which were quickly remedied. There was time in the allotted hour for only a selection of songs, interspersed with narrative. At the broadcast and in the stage performances Dr. Firth and Mr. Fillmore were the accompanists.

The complete success of the production was partly due to the directors and to the polished and in some cases professional acting and singing of the principals and choruses. It was also due to the organization of ticket sales, publicity, and stage managership, all of which were capably handled by unsung students. The popularity of the shows predetermines the continuation of Gilbert and Sullivan in years to come, following the tradition of the last few years.

Orchestra

Greenburg, R. Chapin, Dalen, Thurlow, Jewett, Starke
Berlin, Rohrbach, Lilien, Brewster, Graham, Pratt, Phinney, Eastham, Carter

This year, the second under Mr. MacDonald's baton, the orchestra chose more difficult works and played them well. At Rogers Hall they performed the first movement of Haydn's C Major Symphony

No.7, the "Salomon." At the Walnut Hill and Bradford concerts, Bill Munroe and Jack Eastham were soloists in Handel's Grand Concerto in B-flat Major for orchestra. In their joint concert with Beaver Country Day School, they played the first movement of Mozart's Symphony No.41 in C Major, the "Jupiter."

Perhaps the greatest cooperative effort was achieved in the orchestra's accompaniment to the Bach cantata "Sleepers Wake," performed in its entirety at the Beaver concert.

The orchestra at full strength was comprised of: four 1st violins, six 2nd violins, viola, cello, bass, three flutes, three clarinets, two horns, two trumpets, and piano.

Credit for the orchestra's success in a year when music has been replaced by the sciences in importance should go entirely to Mr. MacDonald. He came to Andover three days a week to insure the success of the orchestra's purpose. It prospered under his leadership.

ORCHESTRA PERFORMING
Hey Bob, give us a smile!

Band

For the first time in its history, P. A. has had a band of more than 45 pieces. This was brought about by student enthusiasm, good leadership, and the great many changes in organization that have taken place in the band this year. A new bandmaster, Mr. Knuttunen, was the faculty conductor and coach. For the first time in its history the band has continued all year. There was more equipment, a permanent place to practice, and the school provided athletic excuses and fare to Exeter. But most important of all, the band was supported by the faculty and the student body so well that it is the best P. A. has ever had.

During the school year the band played before the movies, at football games, and at rallies. Its outstanding job, however, was the performance at the Exeter football game. Mr. Peck, who organized the marching, deserves a lot of credit. Dave Schine, student conductor, did an excellent job of leading and the 21 brasses, 20 woodwinds, and five-man drum section gave out in wonderful style.

Dave says that although this band is good, there is room for improvement. With good luck he hopes to lead a band of 65 men next year.

Radio Activity

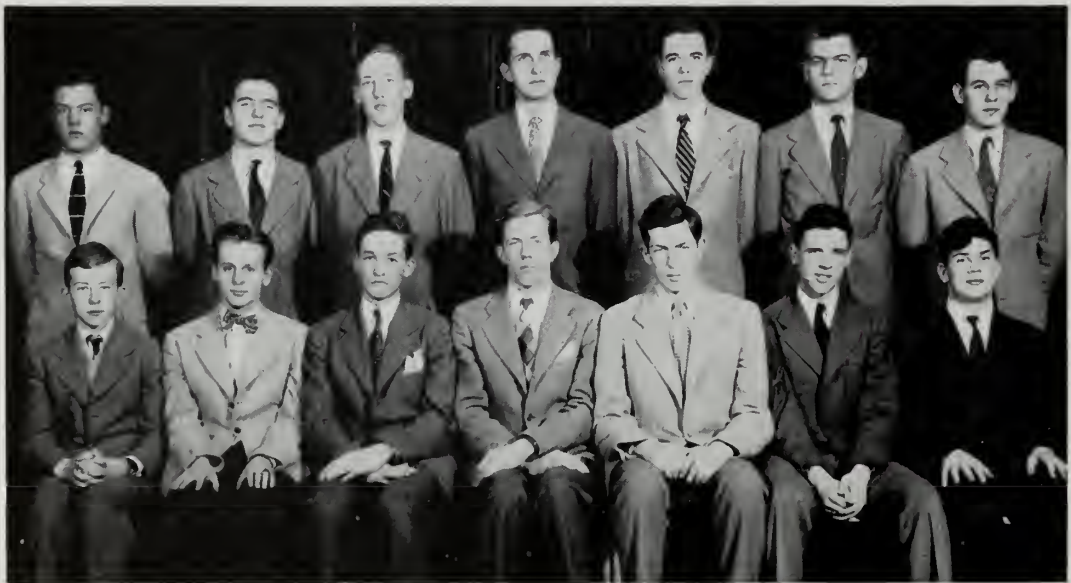

Dr. Fuess, in discussing the purpose of the Phillips Academy Hour, said, "It is intended to provide a community service of pleasure and education, through which the intellectual and cultural resources of the school, as represented chiefly by the members of the faculty, will be made available to a broader public." The first six months of broadcasting have seen the programs fulfill their purpose. At the same time, student participation in them has been by no means inconsiderable.

On Thanksgiving Day, 1943, the Academy vesper service was broadcast from the Cochran Chapel. On December 9 an all-student group gave Stephen Vincent Benet's They Burned the Books; Farrar and Lilien were supported by Pratt, Koechl, Phinney, Boll, Isitt, Coolidge, Kemper, and Blackmer.

The topic "Shall the Soldier Vote?" was debated on January 20 by Sterling, McGowan, Heath Allen, and Dave Beach. A week later "The Reorganization of the Cabinet System" was discussed, Farrar, Coon, Heming, and Al Harris participating. A piano recital by Darling and Collier was followed on February 10 with a program of book reviews, by Donovan, Hardy, Kellett, and Wyman. On February 17, Allen, Sterling, McGowan, and Baty talked on the National Service Act.

In a broadcast of excerpts from The Pirates of Penzance on April 6 solos were sung by Brewster, Pete Stevens, Pratt, Reid and Thaw, with the combined choruses of Abbot and P. A. accompanying. The last major student show, a condensed version of Julius Caesar, included Farrar, Lilien, Gale, Lord, Lauterpacht, Snook, Boll, and Love. The production of this play wound up a thoroughly satisfactory group of student broadcasts; the popularity of the activity assures its continuation.

Latin Players

Volk, McGill, F. Thompson, May, Meeks, Hull, Wyman
Simons, R. Morgan, M. Thompson, Pemberton, Humphries, Farrar, D. Killam

As their seventh annual production, the Latin Players presented a selection of scenes from Plautus' comedy, "Mostellaria." Before the performance, Mr. Goodwin Beach, a classicist of note, spoke to the audience, delivering half his speech in Latin. Mr. Peterkin announced the forthcoming resignation of Dr. Westgate. The latter has been responsible for the origination and continuation of the Latin Players. Before the curtain rose, Dr. Westgate himself gave a short description of the plot.

Dick Morgan, as the god Hercules, welcomed the gathering with an introductory speech. A vengeful slave, Grumio, played by Simons, appeared; his comic tussle with Humphries, as Tranio, led to the appearance of Farrar in the part of Philolaches, a prodigal. He was accompanied by his wife, glamorous ex-slave Philematium (Killam), and a maid (May). A slave rushed up to announce the arrival from Egypt of the father, Theopropides who, played by Thompson, strode on the scene. Tranio (now Ian Pemberton) convinced him that his house was haunted, and the disconcerted old man fled in despair, to the delight of the wicked Tranio. So ended the comedy.

Minor characters included slaves Wyman, Anderson, F. Thompson, Volk, Kohlberg, and McGill. Quinby and Meeks played the parts of revellers, and caroused amusingly. The scenery was built by Kimball, Ryan, and Daland, under the direction of Mr. Heintzelman and Mr. Winslow. Mr. Morgan, Harrington, and Moffly of the Art Department made posters. Mr. Leavitt provided music.

The Latin Players extend their appreciation to Ian Pemberton, president, and Dr. Westgate, director. It is hoped that in spite of Dr. Westgate's absence, plays will continue to be given in years to come.

Pot Pourri

EDITOR CURT FARRAR

This Pot Pourri keeps my average down

Glancing through past POT POURRI's, one gets the impression that they were little more than souvenirs of the Senior Class, of minor interest to other members of the student body. The Editors of the 1944 POT POURRI feel that it is a misconception of the function of a yearbook to limit it to the activities of the graduating class. They have endeavored to make their book a pictorial and verbal narrative that will be representative of and interesting to the whole school.

There is a section devoted entirely to the lower school, with stories of the year from each class's point of view, and pictures of undergraduates. The feature, based on a typical but fictitious senior, is written in amusing style. There are pages and pages of photographs, recalling scenes and incidents that highlighted the year.

Production difficulties in wartime have successfully been combatted by the cooperation of the boards with Sargent Studios and the Andover Press. The POT POURRI staff is indebted to Mr. Johnson for the time and thought he has given the book.

Limited editions like the POT POURRI reaching a small public, are among the first to feel wartime restrictions in advertising. In the face of this, and with the difficulty in obtaining student subscriptions, Business Manager Whit Stevens has done splendid work with his board.

The policy of including Art in the POT POURRI was continued with success. This rival of Photography, under Woodie Stockwell, conjured up several dividers and organized the map inside the cover. Pictures still hold their own, nevertheless, and Dick Morgan and his associates produced a select group of snapshots of all phases of school life.

Our thanks go to Editor-in-Chief Curt Farrar, and faculty advisor Mr. Cook, for their large part in making possible the yearbook as you see it. To them and their staff goes the credit for this, the yearbook of the Class of 1944.

Phillipian

EDITOR MEL BERGHEIM
Of Hem and Heim, Inc.

In addition to the normal problems of issuing an enterprising school newspaper, this year's Phillipian staff was faced with more technical difficulties than other boards had had to face in preceding years. Advertising again was the chief concern, as a shortage of it had caused the staff of the year before to cut The Phillipian from a semi-weekly paper to a weekly. Business Manager Woodrow, however, this year provided enough advertising, and stimulated sufficient student interest in the paper to bring financial success.

Under Editor-in-Chief Melvin Bergheim The Phillipian has maintained a high standard of integrity. Some changes have been made in the format which have improved the paper's quality. In the first place news and sports have been completely divorced. This involved a change in the makeup of the front page. During the Fall Term one-third of the editorial page was set aside each week for a Literary Section, designed to replace the discontinued Mirror as an outlet for student literary effort.

The greatest event of the school year, as far as The Phillipian is concerned, was the joint Andover-Exeter War Bond Drive. It was Editor Bergheim who was almost wholly responsible for the drive's organization here, even down to his personal sale of bonds and stamps. The drive was held concurrent with the national Fourth War Loan, and the competitive feeling between the two schools was well used to Uncle Sam's advantage. Together they raised $43,743.95, Andover winning the competition by some $800.

As a fitting climax for its staff's year of hard work The Phillipian was awarded first place in the Columbia Scholastic Press Association's prep school newspaper competition. There are some higher awards, but The Phillipian is certainly among the first five. All in all the new board, headed by Fred Sanborn, has much to live up to in continuing The Phillipian's progress forward.

Camera Club

McLean, Creelman, Cherry
Isham, Lebenthal, President, Avery

This year the Camera Club's chief problem was a lack of interest, although a more extensive program than ever before was offered. Nevertheless it cannot be said that the club has accomplished nothing the last three terms.

During the Winter and Spring Terms a series of lectures was presented by the club. These lectures, secured by Mr. Minard and James Lebenthal, president of the club, are circulated by Eastman Kodak. They cover almost every phase of amateur photography. They are accompanied by black-and-white and color slides. They were given in the Addison Gallery by Mr. Minard.

Nor was this the only activity of this year's Camera Club. As before the club used the Peabody House darkroom facilities, to which some new equipment was added, making the room even more useful.

The greatest contribution, however, was made by those members who took pictures for the various school publications. This includes all the sports and informal pictures in this book. This activity alone insures success for this year's club, and justifies its continuance.

Printing Club

The Printing Club, like so many other organizations, has been operating under adverse conditions this year. Mr. Van der Stucken has been too busy to devote his time to the club, and many of the members themselves have found that wartime schedules have kept them from spending as much time on the press as they would like. Besides, there is an acute paper shortage. The student body probably first realized this when they found that the familiar four-page church programs had been cut to two pages.

Yet in spite of these changes, the Paul Revere Press has continued to roll. In addition to the programs for the Sunday services, the club also does some private printing for various masters and students. The pay for these extra items goes toward the purchase of new supplies.

Perhaps the largest single jobs that the club has undertaken this year are the printing of a book of sonnets by Mr. Van der Stucken and the programs for The

Railroad Club

PRESIDENT DICK MORGAN
Choo-Choo Baby

Andover's Model Railroad Club continues its slow, steady growth. The enjoyment of this student organization lies in planning new ways of achieving realism in miniature, and then building on those ideas. Under the leadership of Choo Morgan, President, and Tom Howard,

Chief Electrical Engineer, the emphasis has been on the electrical aspect.

Tap switches for independent train control have been installed in the newly constructed control panel. Light diagrams indicate train routes to the operator. Pièce de resistance is the turntable, operated by remote control, and designed and constructed by Howard.

A gift from the school of a 100-volt direct current generator gives the club its much-needed power supply. The five engines, guided by Assistant Electrician Reeves Hart and his co-electricians, have made good use of it.

The scenery, still in its embryonic, unpainted state, has marched around the Pearson basement under the plastered hand of Chief Scenarian Dick Kimball. Since its beginning three years ago, the Railroad Club has made achievement synonymous with progress. It is still going, and growing.

A highlight of the second year of war-time activity of the Rifle Club was the Small Arms Firing School, conducted with the express purpose of providing preliminary gunnery training for service-aged students. Most of the club members, however, were engaged in the usual activities, which were continued as before. Every weekday evening during the Winter and Spring Terms the crack of rifles could be heard in the cage.

The National Rifle Association, of which the Rifle Club is a member, awarded marksmanship medals. Intramural meets were held, as well as the annual members match. No interscholastic competition was undertaken.

The Small Arms Class was under the guidance of Mr. Peck, who instructed twenty students in the construction, care, and firing of target rifles. The passing of both a written and a firing exam was necessary, in order to receive credit.

The large club enrollment of 102, while a burden on the facilities of the club and the nerves of Mr. Peck, attests to the increased interest in this activity. Wartime shortages of ammunition and outside competition could not dampen the war-stimulated popularity of the club.

Newly organized by Mr. Weaver, the Science Club is an informal group which meets in the Chemistry Laboratory. Projects were undertaken by several ambitious students in this first year of the group. Fred Adams built an electroscope for demonstrating electrical principles. Curt Farrar made several crystals of chrome alum. An optical mirror was constructed by Dick Petzold, and Edward Creighton specialized in glass blowing.

As a part of the Science Club, two gasoline engines were mounted on blocks, to be disassembled and rebuilt. A large supply of mineral ores was obtained; projects were started in the Spring Term to extract metals. Also conducted in the spring term were experiments with ion-exchange resins used to purify water and with the making of pigments.

The interest in the organization, although not widespread, has made the activity a success. Plans for expansion of membership and increase in number of fields of endeavor foretell an interesting future for this educational diversion.

IN MEMORIAM

The death of Mr. Edmund J. Schubert on April 21 came as a great and saddening shock to the school. Many of us encountered him in his work with the body-building classes. Others met him as he assisted in coaching the hockey and swimming teams, in the functional swimming course, or as he aided the work of the Department of Health. We soon came to know him for his quiet, friendly smile, his cheerfulness, and his untiring interest in what we were doing. Though we may not realize it, we Seniors particularly owe him a debt for the part he played in helping us prepare for military service. The best monument to a man is the accomplishments he leaves behind. Mr. Schubert's work was devoted to the athletic life of Andover; we respectfully dedicate this Athletics section to his memory.

Varsity Football

Captain Jim Hudner and six other lettermen returned for early practice along with several others from last year's squad. Although a large group from the J. V. raised our hopes considerably, the early season outlook was not too good. Several preps showed up well, however, and contributed to what turned out to be a far better than average team. Coach Steve Sorota deserves much credit for moulding the fine team he put on the field against Exeter, and for a splendid record of five wins against two losses.

Andover faced a weak Harvard J. V. in the first encounter, and showed a brilliant offense in rolling up a 32-0 score. Mauran started the season off by scoring on the first play of the game. Hudner and Zagorski added two touchdowns apiece before the final whistle.

The following week the Andover team journeyed to Revere High to take on a scrappy eleven in its first High School game in many years. Mauran scored twice, Hudner once, against a hard fighting, but smaller team, which managed to score only once. The final score was 18-6.

The Tufts J. V. game the next Saturday was also played away. On a rain-drenched field Andover lost its first shutout in three years, 18-0, in what was actually a closer game than the score indicates. In scoring position three times, the team lacked the final punch to put the ball over. This broke Andover's eight-game winning streak.

Playing away for the third week in a row, Andover defeated the University of Maine 20-6. At the end of the third period the team was trailing 6-0, but a fine display of fight enabled them to finally triumph. A Maine punt was blocked early in the fourth quarter setting up the first touchdown, scored on a pass from Hudner to Zagorski in the end zone. Zagorski added the extra point and continued to score another touchdown and extra point as well. Mauran scored the final tally in this fourth period offensive.

New Hampton was easily overcome 45-6, in the following week's game at Andover. Mauran scored three times, while Nourse, Dalley, J. Zonino, and Sutherland accounted for one each. The reserves saw plenty of action as the first string rested up for the return game with Tufts. The next week was spent in intensive preparation for this game.

In this second Tufts encounter, the Blue Team played its best game of the season, avenging its previous defeat, 12-6. Mauran scored both touchdowns to continue as high scorer for the season. The outstanding line play in the goal-line stand in the third period was perhaps the highlight of the season. For five exciting downs the Blue line held an invigorated Tufts team. Although the opposition scored after an Andover fumble on the next play, the manner in which our line stalled their attack is unforgettable.

After this victory Andover was picked the favorite in the Exeter game, on the basis of five wins and one loss to Exeter's two wins and three losses. Soon to be proved, however, was the old adage that previous records mean nothing in this traditional prep school rivalry. November 13 turned out to be a perfect day for the game and the entire school made the trip to Exeter.

The first quarter was scoreless, both teams playing equally hard football. Two fumbles on punt returns gave Exeter the advantage, but the line successfully stalled their attempts to score after these two bad breaks. Early in the second period, Exeter missed a field goal after their running running attack failed to gain them a score. Following an exchange of punts, the Andover offensive began to move, as the team rolled from their own 32 down to the Exeter two-foot line in eight plays. Captain Jim Hudner gained a lot of this ground on wide end sweeps and Dunc Mauran's fast breaking line plunges accounted for more yardage, as the team drove to what seemed an almost certain score. However, a fourth down fumble within a yard of the Exeter end zone proved the most costly error of the day for the Blue. The half ended without score by either side.

Exeter kicked off to a determined team in the second half. Following two punt exchanges, a Blue attack was halted on the midfield stripe. Exeter then drove to the 23-yard line as the third period ended. In the last period, the Red and Gray continued its drive to within range of the goal, and Ransome went over for the first tally. The extra point was missed. Later in the period, after kicking out of bounds on our eight-yard line, Captain Jackson of Exeter intercepted a flat pass on our four. The line held for three downs, but a fourth down pass by Jackson was completed in the end zone for a second touchdown. The kick for extra point again failed.

Rallying in the last few minutes of play, Andover completed three passes in a drive which resulted in a score, Tippet catching a touchdown pass from Hudner. The attempt for the extra point failed. A desperate passing attack in the last two minutes failed to produce further scoring.

The final score was 12-6 in favor of Exeter. A slight advantage in statistics for the Blue was nullified by bad breaks and failure to make the most of scoring opportunities. Our outstanding defensive play, especially in the line, reflects much credit on Line Coaches Ed Flanagan and Jack Meany. The entire backfield performed well against tough opposition.

At the banquet following the Exeter game, Ed Mead, a regular at left end this year, was elected Captain and Fred Alford was chosen manager for next year.

Junior Varsity Football

Although defeated by Exeter 13-7 in its final contest, Coach Shepard's J. V. team concluded a successful season with a record of three wins against two losses. Playing its own schedule before joining the A squad for the Exeter game, the B squad under the tutelage of Mr. Follansbee, defeated the Punchard seconds once and tied them in another game.

In the first A squad game of the season, a spirited Andover team beat Wilmington High 33-0. In the next encounter, with Methuen, the J. V. went down to defeat 18-0. Against Punchard, three days later, the A squad again won, this time 19-0. In the final pre-Exeter game, the Royal Blue showed power in running up a 31-0 score against the Lawrence High School seconds.

On a cold, wet Wednesday afternoon Coach Shepard fielded a fast, light squad to take on the Exeter All-Club. The game followed very closely the Varsity game of the previous Saturday. Exeter, outplayed throughout, put across two lightning thrusts to go ahead 13-0. Late in the fourth quarter Andover drove to her only score on a pass from Jack Lynch to Jack Eastham. Moreland kicked the extra point.

The strength of the team was due in great measure to its strong line. Coaches Kishon, Leete, and Potter took comparatively green men and developed a hard-charging forward wall. Dave Ohler and Myrt Gaines at the ends were particular standouts along with Captain Jack Tait at center. Larry Ward at tackle also promises to be varsity material.

A host of good backs was a blessing to the Blue. Jack Lynch, Miles Chute, and Pete Reiner are only Lovers with two more years of football ahead of them. Jack Eastham at quarter and Jack Lee at full also were outstanding during the year.

Eleven returning lettermen, led by Captain Carroll, formed a nucleus around which Coach Jim Ryley built the 1943 Soccer team. The opening victory, over Harvard, was followed by wins against Governor Dummer and New Hampton, a tie with Exeter, and defeats at the hands of Deerfield, a British sailor team, and Exeter, for a record of three wins, one tie, and three losses.

Harvard's B squad was easily defeated, 2-0, following which the team travelled to Deerfield. A closely contested game remained scoreless until the last few minutes, when Deerfield managed to put in the only goal. Governor Dummer proved an easy victim, but a team of British sailors from Boston gave a brilliant exhibition of ball-handling and thoroughly outclassed the home team. Andover went on a scoring spree to overwhelm New Hampton, 7-0, scoring in every period.

In the first Exeter game, played on a rain-swept, slippery field at Exeter, neither team was able to score. Offensives could not get started in the mud, and both teams produced strong defenses. The second game, at Andover, was similarly scoreless in the first half. In the early minutes of the third period Exeter tallied, after a nerve-wracking mix-up in front of the Andover goal. The visitors held their lead the rest of the game, despite every effort of the home team to tie the count.

The defense was outstanding all season. Jerry Tompkins, Al Burgess, and Whit Stevens in the halfback line, Woodie Dulaney and Rog Seymour at fullback, and Captain Carroll in the goal, formed an impassable combination, playing every game and allowing only three goals all season. In the forward line there were many changes and combinations. Several men contested for each berth, and Coach Ryley had a wealth of material to choose from. Fred Zonino, Chris Eatough, Ken Chun, Mort Dunn, Jim Rains, and Carl Strong all saw action in starting positions.

Special credit is due Jim Ryley, who, in his thirty-second year of coaching, still produces winning ball clubs. The team was capably led by an iron-lunged captain who yelled unceasing encouragement from his goal position, and a flag-waving manager, who proved a constant source of gum. At the annual banquet Fred Zonino was elected to lead next year's team, with Johnny Blake as manager.

This year's basketball team, ably captained by Wheels Whitney, went through a gruelling schedule losing only three games and defeating Exeter twice, by scores of 54-47 and 61-28.

In their initial encounter, Coach Di Clementi's charges romped over a very weak Lowell Textile team 75-31. It was in this game that Prep Tom Raleigh stunned the crowd by breaking Dick Duden's record of 31 points in a single game. His 16 field goals and one foul shot totaled 33 points.

Camp Langdon, the Blue's second opponent, was swamped in a similar manner 73-45. Tom Raleigh was again top scorer, with 31 points to his credit. The third game saw the tide change as P. A. was defeated 53-39 by a Harvard Medical team paced by a 6 foot 7 inch center.

Andover's next victory was a pleasant one, for the Red and Gray fell to Captain Whitney's squad 54-47. Exeter was leading at the half 20-19, but although the team was nervous, they managed to eke out the victory. Andover's sterling defense stopped many Red threats. On the following Saturday, Andover easily defeated Salem Company F 54-35. Tom Raleigh again starred, scoring 26 points.

In the next two games P. A. met defeat both times. M.I.T. took the first encounter 41-37. This was a hard-fought contest and the outcome hung in the balance up to the final gun. The Harvard B team won a fairly easy victory over the Blue, 34-26.

Jack Lansill went on a scoring spree in the next two contests, scoring 33 points, as the Blue beat Worcester Academy 53-37 and nosed out Salem Coast Guard 37-33. Two more victories followed as Boston University Theological School and Squantum Air Base bowed 57-24 and 37-32. Again Lansill excelled with 26 points in the two games.

In the final game of the season, Andover faced its rival, Exeter, for the second time. Captain Whitney played his best game of the season, running up a total of 18 points to be high scorer for the game. "Deke" sent in all members of the squad, but even so the final score stood at 61-28.

Brought Bishop was elected to succeed Wheels Whitney as Captain, while Doze Fields will replace Tex Neale as manager.

Hockey

CAPTAIN ART MOHER
Melrose's Garrety is bewildered

Near the end of Christmas vacation, Captain Art Moher led the Blue hockey team in the Boston Round-Robin Tournament. The team showed a need of practice as they defeated Pomfret 5-1 but lost to Choate 2-1 and Exeter 3-2. However, the experience they gained helped prepare them for the regular season.

Back at school, the team found poor ice, and experienced more bad luck in the loss of Charlie Smith and Dunc Mauran. After only one day of practice, they lost to Melrose High School, 5-2. In two other pre-Exeter game contests, Andover beat Malden 8-1 and was defeated by Harvard V-12, 5-3. At Exeter the team was victorious 4-1 in a one-sided encounter. Larry Dalley netted Moher's pass for the first score. This was followed by Moher's unassisted goal and Larry Ward's tally on a close-in shot. Dick Welch completed the scoring on a pass from Moher late in the third period after Exeter had made her lone goal. A strong St. Paul's squad defeated Andover 5-2, but Moher's two goals prevented a shutout. Dick Welch tallied three times to lead the team in beating Stoneham High 6-4. The season ended with two losses to Medford High, 6-5 and 2-0. The first of these games was the best of the season, featured by Moher's pulling of the "hat trick."

Captain Art Moher deserves a great deal of credit, not only for being high scorer, but for his spirit and determination, and for his success in welding the team into a well-coordinated unit.

At the banquet, Larry Dalley was elected captain for next year, and Irving Bonbright was chosen to succeed Whit Stevens as manager. Dick Welch received the award presented to the player other than the captain or manager who contributed most to hockey and to Andover through his sportsmanship, endeavor, and ability.

The first meet of the year seemed to prophesy a successful season for the Andover swimmers. Captain Norm Sper broke his own record in the dive when he amassed a total of 113.62; then, swimming the backstroke himself, he joined with Jerry Tompkins, two-year letterman in the breaststroke, and Don Lazo, to tie the record for the 150-yard medley relay.

Against the M.I.T. Junior Varsity the following week, the team won first place in every event but the 200-yard freestyle.

Confident and determined the team played host to the Exonians the following Saturday. Chips Lazo won the 50-yard freestyle event to start the meet. Jerry Tompkins missed first place in the breaststroke by inches; then Exeter took first and second places in the backstroke. The score stood at this time: Exeter 18, Andover 9. Exeter took first place in both the 100 and 200-yard freestyle; Andover taking second and third in both these events. As usual Norm Sper won the dive making the score 32 to 22 in favor of Exeter. Tompkins, Sper, and Herman teamed up to win the medley in almost record breaking time. The score now stood: Exeter 32, Andover 27. An Andover win in the final event, the 200-yard freestyle relay, would have made the score 34 to 32 in our favor, but an initial lead of several feet was one foot too much for Chips Lazo to overcome. The final score of the meet: Exeter 39, Andover 27.

The next three meets with Brookline High, Gardner High, and Worcester, all ended in Andover victories. In the Brookline meet Captain Sper broke his second individual record of the season when he swam the 100-yard backstroke in 1:04.4. Also in this meet Sper, Jerry Tompkins, and Chips Lazo teamed up to finally break the medley relay record in 1:22.3.

The Blue travelled to New Hampshire for the second encounter with Exeter which resulted in an inglorious defeat. The final score: Exeter 50, Andover 16. Norm Sper personally accounted for ten of these sixteen points, winning the backstroke and diving events.

At the annual banquet held after the Exeter meet, Chips Lazo was elected to succeed Norm Sper as captain of the team for next season. Al Harris, retiring manager, is succeeded by Howard Hayden.

Wrestling

CAPTAIN ED COOK
Gosh!

With only three veteran matmen as a nucleus, Coach "Salty" Pieters was fortunate in having several capable new wrestlers with whom to complete his team. To back up the seasoned trio of Captain Ed Cook, Al Allenby, and Bing Abbott were "Okie" Crawford, Skip McKinley, Bill Anderson, John Caldwell, Vint Cartmell, Fred Greene, Fox Thomas, and Steve Hord.

Against the three-year-undefeated Milton Academy squad our men went down fighting, to the score of 20-8. The most dramatic moment of this contest came when Dave "Oklahoma" Crawford pinned his surprised opponent with a double arm lock in just 39 seconds of the first period. To avenge their first defeat, the P. A. wrestlers trampled Weymouth High 27-5, defeating that institution for the third successive year. The first of a pair of Exeter meets was stubbornly battled to a 12-12 stalemate, with every match hotly contested. Scoring for Andover were Anderson, Captain Cook, Crawford, and Abbott.

Each side scored four decisions, but no one was pinned.

A superior Tufts Varsity took the measure of the Blue grapplers, 25-5. The following week, Perkins Institute for the Blind was tackled. Although wrestling solely by sense of touch, the visitors were able to show the home team up, winning 14-11. An outclassed Governor Dummer contingent was overcome by the Blue with a 28-0 sweep.

A determined P. A. team journeyed up to Exeter for the final clash of the season, only to be frustrated, 9-15, in a bitterly contested encounter. Our three decisions were gained by Anderson, Cook, and Abbott, while McKinley, Allenby, and Crawford were edged out by the slimmest of margins.

That the season's record was not more successful must be attributed to lack of experience rather than want of spirit, for every man contributed his utmost effort throughout the winter. Manager Ray Young and Captain Ed Cook set high standards of sportsmanship for their successors. Bill Anderson was elected captain at the banquet. Next year's manager has not yet been chosen.

Track

CO-CAPTAIN JIM HUDNER
They missed him in the springtime

With only a handful of last year's track squad returning, coaches Shepard, Flanagan, Sorota, and Watt had to work with many new and inexperienced men at the beginning of the Winter Term. Their success in building a team from this material is indicated by the crushing $52\frac{1}{2}$ - $281\frac{1}{2}$ defeat of Exeter which climaxed the Winter season. Bomeisler, Nourse, and Griffith swept the shot-put. Firsts were scored in the 40-yard high hurdles by Co-captain Bob Lawlor, in the 300-yard dash by Paradise, the 600 by Dixon, and the 1000-yard run by Chittick. Other place winners included Bob Beach in the 40-yard dash, Hunting in the 600, Strong in the hurdles, and Tom Howard and Co-captain Bob Hatch in the pole vault.

Previous to this victory the Blue had lost two one-sided meets to Tufts, a meet to Harvard, and one to Exeter at Exeter, 41-40, in the closest meet of the season. For Andover, Chittick's double victories in the 600- and 1000-yard runs, and the triumph of Lawlor and Co-captain Jim Hudner in the hurdles were the high points of the meet. After this meet, Lawlor was elected co-captain to succeed Hudner, who graduated in February as a Plan A Senior. In the last meet before the avenging Exeter contest, the Blue routed a weak Worcester Academy team by the score of 61-2.

In addition to the regular Winter meets, a mile relay squad of Dixon, Chute, Paradise, and Chittick represented the school in the Boston B.A.A. Games, winning a decisive victory in a special race against Exeter.

Andover began the Spring season with much the same line-up in the track events as that which ran in the Winter meets. Bob Beach, Bill Moore, and Skip Paradise in the 100 and 220, and Jack Dixon and Miles Chute in the 440 all showed great promise as the season opened. Of the large number of candidates for the half-mile,

CO-CAPTAIN BOB HATCH
"Cornelius W."

Ross Hoy, Dick Porter, and Hunting stand out. They all ran the 600 in the Winter season. Cy Chittick is all alone in the mile, with Johnny Ryan possibly placing in the later meets. Hatch and Howard in the pole-vault, Neuhoﬀ and Thorndike in the hammer and Mackenzie in the high jump are the best men in a fairly weak field events squad.

As this article is written, only two Spring meets have been held. The first meet with Tufts was lost by the substantial margin of $33\frac{1}{2}$ to $83\frac{1}{2}$. But the Harvard meet showed great improvement and promises well for the following contests. Victories in most of the running events turned the tide, and the Blue won 41-40. Paradise and Bob Beach finished one-two in both the 100- and 220-yard dashes. Thorndike won the hammer-throw, with Howie Reed second.

All sights are set for the New England Prep School meet to be held at Andover on May 20th, and for the Exeter meet at Exeter on the following weekend. As an added highlight of the Prep School meet, Gil Dodds, world's indoor mile champion, will run a special invitational mile against top-flight college competition. The team looks forward to defeating the Red again, and to regaining the Prep School championship lost last year.

Woodrow, Manager; Welch, DeWitt, Wilson, Phelan, Talbot
Killam, Dunn, J. Zonino, Abbott, Moher, Captain; F. Zonino, Tippet, Neale, C. W. Smith

About forty men reported for the first baseball practice this winter, and before the end of the term Coach Follansbee had cut the squad to about twenty-five men, including only three returning lettermen:

CAPTAIN ART MOHER
Sparkplug second baseman

Captain Artie Moher, outfielder Fred Zonino, and third baseman Mort Dunn. Dick Welch, Dick DeWitt, Herk Warren, Fred Killam, Charlie Smith, Jim Zonino, and Norm Wilson, all up from last year's J. V., along with newcomers Bill Abbott, Ray Tippet, Bill Talbot, Buck Ihde, O. J. Anderson, and Bill Phelan were outstanding in the first practices.

Again this year the team was hindered by bad weather, and could only have a few days of outdoor practice before taking on Dorchester High. But the day of the game was fair and warm, and the Blue wasted no time in grabbing an 8-0 lead by the fourth inning. Dorchester was held powerless throughout the game by the excellent pitching of Charlie Smith and Bill Phelan. Aided by strong hitting, the Blue breezed to a 12-2 victory. Outstanding batters were Bill Abbott, who gathered four of Andover's fifteen hits, and Dick Welch, who made two hits and drove in three runs.

In their next game, the Blue were defeated 5-2 by an underrated Rindge Tech team in a colorless contest. Fred Killam started on the mound for the Blue, but he got into trouble and was relieved in the third inning by Phelan, who finished out the game. Rindge scored one run in the third inning off Killam, and added four more off Phelan, two in the eighth and two in the ninth. Andover's pitchers only yielded seven hits between them, but they lacked the full support of the team, which had not yet rounded into shape. As it was, the Blue scratched out only six hits off the excellent Rindge pitcher. Welch led the batters with two singles, while Mort Dunn collected his second extra base blow of the season, a double in the fifth inning. The first Andover run was scored by Bill Talbot, who came home on Fred Zonino's hit to center field in the fourth inning. The second one came in the ninth inning, when Danny Carroll, running for Jim Zonino, went to second on a balk and took third on Smith's infield grounder. Art Moher hit a sharp single to center to score

MANAGER BILL WOODROW

Carroll, but the team was unable to sustain the rally and ended the game without further scoring.

At the time that this is written, the team has had little chance to really work together and polish the ragged edges. However, with the excellent schedule Coach Follansbee has arranged, they should have enough practice and experience to beat Exeter in May.

J. V. Baseball

Under the guidance of Coaches Dunbar and Leete, the Junior Varsity enjoyed a satisfactory if not completely successful season. The entire group was divided into "A" and "B" squads, each with its own schedule. In this manner a larger group of potential varsity players could be given instruction, practice, and experience.

The "A" squad, after the final cut, was a small but efficient aggregation. The pitching staff consisted of Horne, Dunbar, and A. C. Smith. In the infield were Jones at first, Carter at second, Lackey at short, Ross at third, and McCracken as a utility man. Cliff Crosby worked behind the plate, and Caulkins, Reiner, and Thomes completed the team in the outfield.

The first "A" squad game was dropped to Lawrence High's Second team, 7-4. Don Dunbar pitched well, but he did not get the necessary support from his teammates. The second encounter was a 10-5 victory over Central High School. Walt Horne pitched, and Carter and Jones both collected 2 hits. The "B" squad had not played its first game when this article went to press.

The turnout for the Junior Varsity, and the enthusiasm and ability of its teams, indicates that the Varsity team of next year and the year after will be good. Under the "farm" system, which begins with the clubs and works players up into the Junior Varsity and from there to the Varsity, better ballteams are representing Andover on Brothers Field.

With a large number of men returning from last year's squad, the lacrosse team was better than ever this season. Friday afternoon practices in the Cage during the winter gave newcomers a chance to develop; in the spring Coaches James and Littleton rapidly shaped the squad into a smoothly-functioning unit.

Captain Joe Reisler led the team from the center midfield position. In the attack Heckel sparked the scoring, and Gaines was outstanding in setting up plays. Robinson and Zagorski alternated in the third position. Dalley and Hudner started in midfield with Reisler, constituting a rugged defensive, which also was responsible for a good deal of scoring. The defense soon gained needed experience and became an efficient group, under Reid, Herman, Hardwick, and Bomeisler. Hanke did the goal tending.

Ted Heckel paced the attack with ten goals in the first game of the season in which the Blue defeated Tufts, 16-11. Gaines was credited with two scores and several assists, and Reisler tallied. The defense showed room for improvement at this early time, but managed to hold Tufts to 11 goals. At M.I.T. the team again scored 16 times, holding the Tech force to 7. In these first two games Andover scored as many goals as it did in the entire 1943 season.

The Governor Dummer encounter was a rout. It was the third 16-goal game for the Blue, and a shutout for the defense, which showed marked improvement after only three games. With the Deerfield and Exeter teams still to beat, as this article goes to press, the lacrosse men have shown up remarkably well; so encouragingly in fact, that Exeter's undefeated contingent may have its streak snapped. Since the beginning of A-E Lacrosse competition Exeter has never lost a match to an Andover group.

Captain Reisler did a great deal to promote interest in lacrosse at Andover—the success of his team is due in large part to his leadership. Credit is also due to Manager Windy Briggs and both coaches. Prospects for next year are bright—the enthusiasm and increasingly widespread following of lacrosse indicates bigger and better squads in years to come.

Tennis got a head start on the weather, with practice on Sundays in the cage all winter. By the beginning of the regular season, in April, the team was shaping up. Potential first team players, who had shown their ability in the fall season and winter tryouts, formed a nucleus around which Coaches Kelley and McCarthy built the team. There was an abundance of material to work with, including several lower-classmen.

Captain Vic Kiam led an unwieldy group of 140 hopefuls after spring vacation; an extensive cut was immediately made, particularly of indulgent, leisure-loving seniors who would never make the team. The courts were in condition in time for several weeks of workout before the first match. By May 1 there was a small, select group on Brothers field, with Kiam, Raleigh, Castagnet, Gruner, Kittleman, Sper, Phinney, and Chapin competing for first team berths.

There was so much ability and enthusiasm in the tennis group that a second team was organized, which played several matches. Pratt, Lansill, Hatton, Madiera, and Estin besides several lowerclassmen, played on this team. The part of the squad that was not on either team played a tournament in May. Coach Kelley in this way was able to pick out those younger players who would probably make up the Varsity next year or the year after.

The season began with a crushing 9-0 victory over Brookline. In this match, Kittleman, playing number two singles, came from behind to win and make a clean sweep for the Blue. The next match was with the M.I.T. varsity. Up to the final point the decision was in doubt, but the Tech doubles teams won to clinch the meet 6-3. Next came a victory over Winchester 8-1.

On May 12 and 13 the New England Inter-Scholastics were held at Andover. The P.A. entry consisted of Raleigh, Kiam, Kittleman, and Gruner. Raleigh reached the finals, but was too tired to be in good form and lost to Exeter's Glenn Shively. On the same Saturday the second team overpowered a very weak Milton team 9-0. The team should finish the season with an excellent record.

For the success of the season credit is due to the Coaches, Mr. Kelley and Mr. McCarthy, and to Captain Kiam, who has been playing first-rate tennis for three years. Woodie Stockwell and his assistant managers kept the team well supplied with victory balls. The large and increasing interest among the undergraduates in tennis promises excellent teams in the next few years.

INTRODUCTION and DEDICATION

This feature section carries no message of great importance; it is, rather, an attempt to capitalize on the events of our Senior year, intended to amuse, and to remind us that P.A. was not all work and drudgery. For those devotees of subtle humor we have tried to avoid the obvious in some stories, but there is plenty of corn too; for we think corn is healthy. Our coverage of school life is of necessity incomplete, but we have tried to touch on as many of its phases as we could, at the same time avoiding controversial and embarrassing matters. In short these stories, which tell only a few of the episodes of Joe Phillips' life at Andover, are meant to be taken in a good spirit. We feel that anyone who feels hard used by us in our attempts to be amusing should be able to laugh along with us.

* * *

Mrs. Elizabeth Cushing Goodhue Fuess was a symbol to us of just such a spirit of good natured fun on the Hill. To her memory we respectfully dedicate this section of the 1944 POT POURRI.

Senior

Joseph Phillips had a queer feeling in the pit of his stomach. He was riding the Boston and Maine Railroad in the direction of Andover, but he wasn't train sick, just all prickly inside. Around him were all his friends, gabbling about summer experiences and exchanging new jokes. They were generally enjoying themselves in the spirit of catching the last few free breaths they could until Christmas, for the train had just pulled out of Ballardvale. The train jerked along for a few feet, lurched a couple of times, halted, and then finally got under way. After the usual cracks about the B. and M. equipment, someone in the rear of the car shouted out, "It's great to be a Senior!"

"Wait till I get my hands on those Preps," somebody near Joe said in a voice overburdened with vengeance. The Prep sitting next to Joe straightened up and looked around.

"What's Preps?" he asked timidly.

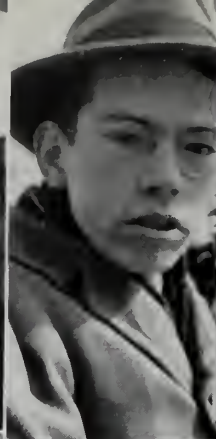

"Preps is new guys," said Joe, busy with his thoughts. He was going to have plenty of fun with the Preps too, so why was he feeling like one himself at the moment? He was a Senior. Suddenly he realized that that was what was wrong with him: he was just finding out what it meant to be a Senior. A quotation flashed across his memory from somewhere out of the past. "With leadership go not only fame and praise, but also responsibility." Seniors are leaders, he thought. His new-found responsibility made him feel quite good and he was annoyed when the Prep at his elbow interrupted his reverie.

"How far is it to the school from the station, pal?" Seniors must be dignified and Preps put in their places.

"I am a Senior," he said in austere tones. "And you are a Prep. When Preps address Seniors they are expected to show respect worthy of their superiors. Let that be a lesson to you." The Prep seemed properly impressed and lapsed into silence. Joe was so completely taken up with his position as a Senior, and especially with his dignity, that he failed to notice that the train had arrived at Andover. Mickey Klotz, a friend from the year before, saw him staring into space and making no move to get up.

"Hey, Phillips!" he shouted, "going to Lawrence so early in the year?" Joe woke up, blushed, and struggled to his feet, still trying to look dignified, in spite of the heavy bag he was carrying. He made his way down the aisle and stepped gingerly onto the station platform. Whether it was the Andover climate, the mob around him, or what, we shall never know, but in the rush for seats in the taxi Joe lost his hat and all his dignity. And up to now he hasn't found either of them.

Dear Mother

Joe Phillips was sitting in his room making believe he was studying when his roommate, Hank Grope, came in and asked, "Say, Joe, got a piece of theme paper?"

"Yeah," said Joe, "right here in my drawer." Whereupon Joe gave the drawer an experimental tug, but it wouldn't open. He pulled harder; still it wouldn't open. "Gimme a hand here, will ya, Hank?" Joe grunted. Together they gave the drawer a yank strong enough to stretch a synthetic elastic band. Suddenly, Joe found himself sprawled on the other side of the room and Hank discovered he was taking inventory of Joe's dirty laundry. The contents of the drawer were strewn all over the room. Joe, picking himself up, began to paw through the pile of papers on the floor. "No theme paper," he announced sadly; "old letters, exams, crib sheets, Ancient History notes, college application blanks, maps,—but no theme paper."

"Never mind," sighed his roommate removing a pair of athletic socks that were draped artistically around his ears, "I'll get some downstairs."

"Hey! Help me pick up this mess," Joe yelled after the departing Hank. Too late, he had gone. Joe began to scoop up the papers on the floor. An old math exam paper caught his eye. "Thirty-two," Joe shuddered, reading the red-penciled mark in the top left-hand corner. "Get thee out of my sight," he muttered as he tossed the paper out the window. The exam paper having been disposed of, an old letter was now on top of the pile. "Hm-m," he murmured, "wondered why I never mailed this." He began to read the letter, squinting occasionally as he tried to decipher his own handwriting. . . .

Williams Hall

Sept. 23, 1940

Dear Mother,

Gee! I'm lonsome. Of course, Andover is a swell place and I like it very much and I like my housemaster and I think the food is O.K. and I like my room, but I'm still lonsome.

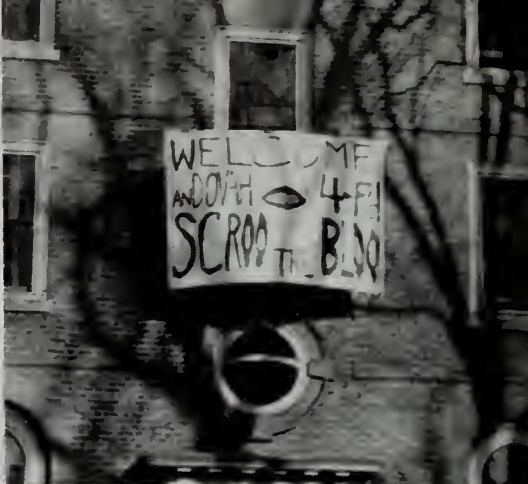

Gee! We have to spend a lot of money here. Today I had to buy a Poeperee (whatever that is); a Philipeun; two pressing contracks, one from Burns, and another from Lanrock's; a room key; a mirror (I don't know why because I already have one in my room); a Blue Book (they tossed in a map of the school free); and a Prep cap. I also had to pay $2 dollars so I can use my radiator. I still have to buy my books and I am broke so please send me some more money quick as they tell me that the teachers get very mad if you come to class without any books.

Gee! They have an awful thing up here called prepping. Every time a Senior has something he wants carried, a prep has to carry it. Today I had to carry a box of books over to Paul Revere Hall but I couldn't find Paul Revere Hall so I left the books at a place they told me was the library. A nice lady standing behind a desk said thank you. So I guess everything will be alright. After I had gone downtown to get my prep cap a big guy said a prep can't walk down Mane Street so I don't know how to get downtown any more. The map of the school is too small.

Gee! I like my room. Part of the ceiling slants down so it looks just like a cave. The wallpaper sort of reminds me of your flower garden around October and there's a little hole in the wall where the plaster leaks out but I covered that up with a piece of adhesive tape from my hockey stick. I've got a nice window only the curtains you sent me don't fit—they drag on the floor but I pinned them up sose their ok. My bed is not very comfortable because one side sags down too much. I fell out of bed three times on that side last night. But I like my room very much. I guess I won't put that geranium plant you gave me in the window; nobody else seems to have a plant in there window.

Gee! I had to make out my schedule this morning and was that a lot of work! I don't like it very much though because I don't have any classes on Saturday morning and in grammer school we never had to go to school on Saturday and I think it would be sort of fun to go to school on Saturday and everybody else has classes on Saturday. Maybe I can get it changed.

Gee! I guess I have to stop writing now because its time to go to supper. Gee! I'm lonsome.

your loving son,

JOSEPH

P.S. Don't forget to send me some more money!!!

Opus to a Mouse

Eck!

To the accompaniment of numerous falsetto feminine shrieks and a roar of laughter, a group of lower class moviegoers, their clothes in various stages of disarray, climbed to precarious perches on the backs of their seats in G.W.H.

For the moment the girls in the balcony were forgotten as the heads of the audience turned toward the disturbance. Hedy Lamarr in all her ecstatic beauty could have diverted only the finicky five per cent at such a time.

Those who happened to be sitting on the aisle saw a small mouse, not knowing that he was the cause of the uproar, run up the aisle and out the door, kindly opened for him by Mr. Barnyard.

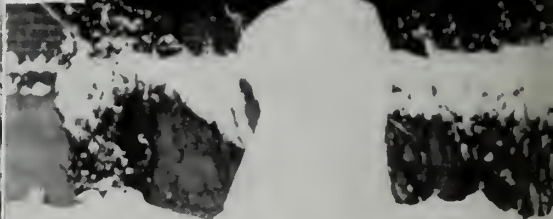

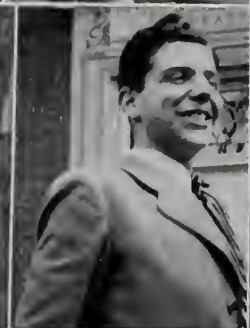

Joe Phillips pulled a small cardboard box out of his pocket and turned to the lad on his right. With a knowing leer he showed him the words on the box: "Marvo, the Amazingly Lifelike Mechanical Mouse" was written in small, mouse colored letters.

Shortly afterward, the tumult and the shouting died down, and the picture started. The audience collectively settled down to watching for scenes where the Hays Office had slipped up.

Moods

On an English examination at the end of the Fall Term, Joe was asked to write a short paragraph on "a change of mood of a number of people that you have observed recently." The following is what he wrote, after biting his pencil for several minutes and hoping fervently that Mr. Blackford was in a good mood when he read it.

"All last weekend, the mood of the Seniors was one of despondency, desperation, and feverish work. Whispered conferences were going on all over the school, in dorms, on the campus, in the commons room. In the library, an unfortunate few were striving against all hope to beat the hands of the clock racing inevitably towards the hour of doom. Crib notes, class notes, notes of every possible description were being copied as fast as the palsied fingers of sleep-starved Seniors could copy them. People were seen studying everywhere, from tables in the Commons to the lavatories. Doc's was cluttered with worried students speeding avidly through hosts of material on some damn tariff or other. The atmosphere dripped with the sweat of burning brows, and cases of eyestrain were almost as common as the ants. Events sped faster and faster toward the climax, which was finally reached at eight o'clock Monday morning. An hour and a half later the campus was dotted with small groups, making their way slowly toward George Washington Hall for Assembly. In each group someone said, 'Let's not talk about it,' and every one agreed. People were relaxing and taking an interest in the little things of life again. Somebody told a joke, and a few of his friends found they could laugh again. Life was gradually coming back to normal. The American History Exam was over."

Mr. Blackford gave him a 95 on the answer, with no comment.

"... L through Q at 3:15, S through Z at 3:45." The words of the registrar drifted dimly into Joe's consciousness, disturbing his 10 A.M. rest period. "What did he say?" he whispered to Harry Phlubb, his neighbor.

"P.I. tests this afternoon at 3:15," Harry hissed.

Promptly at 3:25, Joe arrived at the Gym, only to find that a large crowd was ahead of him. Apparently the thing to do was to undress; so Joe soon stood forth in tasty green and red shorts and his roommate's best purple socks, feeling athletic but slightly foolish. A whistle blew. "Attention! Form a single line along the wall and be quiet!" With a skill born of long practice, Joe made his way to the head of the line, elbowing in behind his friend, Harry. He snarled fiercely at a

The whistle blew again, and the line moved slowly past the table where the Major presided over a record file. By this time Joe's feet were getting cold. Looking over the line, he found what he had taken at first glance for a pillar was really the wrestling captain's leg. Joe had planned to go out for wrestling in winter, but now little prickles of doubt assailed him.

"I'm going to try wrestling," Joe said in a rather superior tone. ("At least," he thought, "I don't look as silly as that kid in the long underwear.") The wrestling captain chinned himself with one hand. "H-m-m, twenty minutes a day," mused Joe. "Next!" snapped a voice, and Joe found himself before the Major.

"Step on the scales. Weight?"

"One fifty-eight," Joe blurted, misread-

The Major set his jaw and erased something on the card. "What winter sport are you planning to take?" he asked, looking at Joc sceptically. Joe's determination melted.

As he struggled up to a B in the pole climb, aided by some sarcastic comments from the crowd below, he mentally cursed whoever it was that invented these damn tests. Still thinking explosive thoughts, Joe launched himself in the standing broad jump, coming down very hard with another B. He progressed to the bar vault, and after some concentration heaved himself over on the second try. That was more like it! His confidence was nearly restored. And he jumped 21 inches at the blackboard, whatever that proved. Another A, Joe was triumphant. As he left for the swimming pool, he turned to see the wrestling captain fall on his face in the broad jump. The triumph was complete. After all, what the heck was wrong with general ex? Habeas Snowball

Crash!

The hard-packed snowball cleanly broke a hole the size of a fist in the glass door in front of the Beanery, accompanied by the merry tinkling of broken glass and a sigh of relief from the boy who had ducked it as it went by. Joe Phillips, his right arm outstretched in the manner of a statue of Progress, surveyed his work and said, "Oh! I missed."

At the same time he saw, out of the corner of his eye, Mr. Follanfuess coming out of Morse. The air cleared of flying snow in a miraculously short time. The combatants disappeared as rapidly as possible, while Joe pulled his coat over his head and walked with dignity back to his dorm.

That night in his prayers Joe asked Heaven to protect Mr. Follanfuess's soul from harmful influences, but in vain. The next morning in Assembly he heard the fateful words. "Phillips, J., is asked, with all due respect for his constitutional rights, to appear in disciplinary court with whatever alibis and aliases he has to offer..."

"J. Phillips," said an ominous, ringing voice, "a writ of habeas snowball has been sworn out against you by a member of the faculty. You have been accused of conduct unbecoming a gentleman. What have you to say for yourself?"

"Well, sir, you know how it is. Some days you just can't hit anything. Besides, he hit me first."

"That's enough. You agree, of course, that you have had a fair trial by a jury of your superiors. You have been found guilty. Now your sentence might have been unduly harsh had it not been for my intervention. The jury suggested four demerits, but I have caused the sentence to be commuted to six demerits, three cuts, and pro."

"But I already have six demerits, seven cuts, and pro. What will they do to me?"

"That is indeed unfortunate. But in view of that nice 66 you got in Current Events, 'they,' as you put it, may not be unduly hard on you. That's all I can tell you now, I'm afraid, Phillips. I'm sorry. Next..."

As Joe was absorbed in stripping his daily candy bar of the wrapper which proclaimed its "dry milk solid" content in enthusiastic capitals, his attention was caught by the above poster, displayed on the Beanery bulletin board. The sign went on to list the priceless heirlooms, keepsakes, and other miscellaneous bric-a-brac which near-bankruptcy and the circumstances of global war were forcing the owner to part with at ruinous prices. With an eye to acquiring new records with which to torment his long-suffering victrola, Joe hastened to the room, where apparently even the owner's soul could be purchased at 50% of cost (in cash).

Upon his arrival, he found a crowd already gathered. They were mostly Lowers, eyeing andirons, fire tongs, and an inlaid cigarette case in anticipation of the next year's move to rooms with fireplaces. The supposedly unfortunate owner stood dreamily wrapping a rubber band around a healthy looking wad of greenbacks (legal tender for all private obligations due at Doc's) while two Andover Men haggled, in a gentlemanly way, of course, over the possession of a definitely unexpurgated recording of "Frankie and Johnnie." Other members of the student body, made art-conscious by the efforts of the Addison Gallery, were avidly buying the works of A. Varga, Esq. for 10 cents apiece. Among the books offered for sale, Joe noticed Poetry: Its Appreciation and Enjoyment, Reading for Fun, and Understanding Fiction, their somewhat tired appearance showing that they contained material that only an author could enjoy.

Joe found that the remaining records were nearly all of vintage 1927, produced by the Variety Talking Machine Company, which he decided would be an insult even to his Model-T vic. The other items, including lamps, cushions, an easy chair with double hernia, and half a pair of curtains, were offered to the public at prices which appeared far more "ruinous" to the buyer than the seller. Joe finally escaped from this bazaar, frightened away by its operator, who offered to sell him a Girl Scout Manual for a mere 50 cents. As he went out the door, he heard a Junior being high-pressured into buying an only slightly broken electric razor, "genuine wartime goods," for future delivery in 1947.

Joe was well experienced in asking girls to proms. He knew that only one out of every three accepted; so he asked three at once, sending them all duplicate letters. Three days later he got back three pink, perfumed letters, each accepting his kind invitation with grace. To put it mildly, he was rather confused as to what to do. To find dates for the other two seemed the only way for him to extricate himself, and the girls would probably not like that too much. But it seemed the best he could do. He decided to take Marge, a particular favorite of his, himself, and to try to get dates for Barbara and Jane, the other two.

He left the commons room, where he had been thinking it over, and began to prow around for prospective blind dates. Whom should he see but his roommate, Hank Grope, sauntering around Flagstaff Court?

"Grobe," he said, approaching him, "I am on the spot."

"I know," said the observing Hank.

"You left the letters on your desk, and I simply could not resist the perfume; so I read them. It so happens that my girl couldn't come, and I would be delighted to escort Marge to the Prom. She sounds like a nice girl."

"I'm taking Marge," protested Joe.

"Why don't you take Barbara? She's swell."

"Marge or nuttin'," said Hank, and Joe heaved a sigh and gave in. They retired to their room to think of someone for Barbara, Joe having decided on Jane as second choice. Next door to them lived Jim Strong, a husky football player who came from Bermuda and didn't know any girls in the States. "Jim's our man," they thought, and rushed next door to get him.

"I'd like to take Jane, if I hadn't already told my roommate I would take his sister," he said after seeing the girls' pictures. Joe wasn't too anxious to give up Jane, but Hank persuaded him to compromise for Barbara, who was really a nice girl, and they both worked on Jim until he promised to find his roommate, break the date and return as soon as possible.

He had not returned two hours later, when Mickey Klotz wandered in looking for food. "I need a date for the Prom," he said. "Either of you fellows know a girl I could ask?" Joe and Hank were convinced that Jim would not return, so they settled the thing right there. Mickey was to take Barbara, Hank, Marge, and Joe, Jane. They wrote the necessary letters, Joe explaining to the girls, as best he could, his predicament, and gently shoving them off on the other boys. Just as they returned from mailing the letters they found Jim entering the room.

"Sorry I took so long, fellows," he said. "I had to help my roommate find a date for his girl. She's darn goodlooking, so this Jane better be pretty hot." Joe was about to explain that he was sorry, but the girls were all dated up, when he remembered what the rumor factory had reported of people that Jim didn't like.

"I was going to take her myself," he said, "but I've decided I don't want to go."

"Tell me another," said Jim, grinning knowingly.

Joe was very disgusted with life that night. Starting out with three dates and ending up with none was quite a blow. For the next three weeks he tried desperately to get a date, but it seemed that all the girls he knew were busy for that day. He finally came with a blind date from Lowell, and after he saw her he began to wish he were blind. The evening wasn't really a failure, though, because he managed to get a dance with Marge from his roommate, and he took her into a corner and explained the whole thing to her in detail. After much persuasion she forgave him and consented to several dates during the Spring vacation. At least Joe had something to look forward to.

"Oh, how I hate to get up..."

Spring Sports

Hank Grope came bounding into the room, his face cracked open in a broad grin. From a torrent of words could be deciphered the fact, unbelievable to both Joe and Hank, that the latter had made the Varsity baseball squad. Joe realized that he had chosen no Spring sport.

Baseball was immediately rejected as out of the question. It was one thing to tell your friends that you planned to go out for the Varsity, but it was something else to be cut, successively, from Varsity, Junior Varsity, and Club, within a period of two weeks. Joe remembered vividly.

Lacrosse was the next possibility. There seemed to be a growing enthusiasm for this Indian pastime. From what Joe had seen of it, he was reminded of a combination of football and baseball, with the added bang of weapons, in the form of long, hard sticks. Wasn't the object of the game to defend yourself against similarly armed opponents?

Tennis and track remained. Joe chose track, having nourished since childhood a dislike for boys in white who took it out on a harmless little fuzz ball. At least track would be humane, manly, healthy.

Several days later, when the track hopefuls reported to the field, uncomfortable and chilly in shorts and sweatshirts, Joe was among them. A variety of pleasures spread before him; it was like having to choose dessert at a swank restaurant, with someone else paying the bill, or was it? At once Joe noticed the milers and half-milers pounding by with far-off expressions of unconcern on their faces. That seemed ideal, just to run around with your thoughts. So he joined in behind them as they trailed around the track. Steady pace...right behind them...nothing to it...green spots don't mean anything...must get...bigger shoes...feet...feel...like...lead...ought...to...breathe....

After they had revived Joe with a bucket of water, and the coach had advised against any more distance running, he found himself alone on the grass. His gaze wandered to the pole vaulting pit. He watched the graceful movements of the vaulters until his zeal overwhelmed his common sense. He strolled over to the pit, and when no one seemed concerned with him, picked up a pole and walked to the end of the cinder path. Trying to imitate the antics of the others as best he could, he stuck the pole in a conveniently located hole at the end of the path and sprang for the crossbar. His momentum carried him up...up...up...the ground spun around beneath him...Phillips gripped the stick more tightly...the distant earth, after pausing undecidedly in its gyrations approached rapidly, like a long-lost friend, with palm outstretched. Joe felt the palm. It was hard....

When Hank came in after supper that night, and the subject of sports was brought up, Joe managed to convince a skeptical and astonished right fielder that as a javelin thrower he would definitely be Major A material...as soon as he got the cast off his arm.

Deep as Hell

"What the hell am I going to write that essay about?" Joe said to Mickey Klotz, who was helping himself to some of his roommate's best peanut butter. "Blackford doesn't like anything I do."

"You know, I think I have the line on him," said Mickey between mouthfuls. "I think what he wants is something deep."

"But he said not to write on anything world-shaking. I thought he wanted an essay on something small, like a chair, or a desk, or something unimportant like that."

"Nah, you got him all wrong. What he wants is something deep."

"How am I going to write on something deep?" asked Joe, who almost never had a thought reaching deeper than his stomach. "Look, Klotz, I think I ought to write on something like the desks up in Pearson with all the carving on them. Remember, we got to read those essays aloud tomorrow."

"Sure, and wouldn't you look queer talking to the whole class about marks on desks," retorted Mickey scornfully. "Here, take this book." He pointed to a tome entitled Selections from the Greek and Roman Philosophers which some enthusiastic relative had given to Joe. "Read some of the stuff in it and write it down in your own words. That's the way to make a real hit."

Joe opened the book doubtfully and started to read. "Matter is composed of . . . What would I use for a word like matter, Mick?"

"What is matter, you goon?"

"Matter is . . . well . . . just stuff, I guess."

"Sure, so use 'stuff'."

"Is your theme going to be deep, Mickey?" Joe asked dubiously.

"Deep as hell," said Klotz.

In English the next day, it so happened that Mr. Blackford called on Joe first. Joe rose rather unsteadily and began: "Stuff. All space is filled with matter, or stuff. Stuff cannot be created or destroyed, but there is so much of it that it must have come from somewhere, but no one knows where. I think that all the stuff came from . . ."

Mr. Blackford interrupted him at this point. "Phillips," he said, controlling himself with visible effort, "sit down and listen to this; it may do you some good. I love to teach, but it is boys like you that make me want to go out and dig ditches for a living. If I have said it once, I have said it five times that I want you to write about something simple, and not to deal with ideas over which you have no control. Whether you are misparaphrasing Lucretius, or digging this rot out of your own brain, I don't know. But it will take better than an honor average to pass you for this term, after this outrage. I had confidence in you, Phillips, and you produce this." Mr. Blackford rescued himself from the verge of tears and said, "What do you have, Klotz?" Joe, trembling with rage himself, waited for the first "deep"

words to issue from the mouth of his friend, and wondered whether Mr. Blackford would collapse on the spot. Thereupon, Mickey rose and read a nice little essay entitled The Carvings on the Desks in Pearson Hall which Mr. Blackford termed "an example you would do well to follow, Phillips."

Prom Date

Thumbing through the record pile on the mantel, Joe discarded "Pistol Packin' Mama" as being unsuited to his mood. At last finding what he wanted, he placed it on the vic, which sighed wearily and gave out with "Moonlight Serenade." Joe locked the door, hoping fervently that his roommate, Hank Grope, had enough dough to keep him occupied at Doc's for some time. He extracted a sheet of stationery from Hank's top drawer, brushed aside an accumulation of Milky Way wrappers, and seated himself at his desk. A brief search located his fountain pen in his hip pocket. "May 9, 1943" he began, then slowly crossed out the "1943" and wrote "1933" instead. At this point "Moonlight Serenade" died with a rasping gurgle, and Joe rose to replace it with "Stardust." On his way back to the desk he lifted another sheet of paper, on which he began again:

May 9, 1944

DEAR MARGE:

Joe gazed out the window a moment, then changed the "Dear" to "Dearest". How the heck to begin? For inspiration he lifted his eyes to the Varga calendar over his desk, shifted his gaze to Marge's picture on the mantel, and then back to the Varga epic with a slightly wistful sigh.

"Do you still remember the night of the Christmas formal?"

After a moment's thought, Joe decided this was the wrong approach, since after all she might not. A better idea struck him, so he stopped filling in the O's on a loose history note that happened to be lying around, and began to write.

"It seems a very long time since I last saw you. Do you miss me? We are having a Prom the 7th . . ."

A vicious battering on the locked door announced the return of his roommate, who burst in just as Joe slipped the letter under his blotter. Recognizing Joe's disheveled hair and "Stardust," which was breathing its last on the vic, as indications that Joe had been composing phrases of purple passion, Hank made a dive for the blotter.

"Let me see. Which so-called babe is it this time?" he asked, snatching up the paper. "Ah-h-h! Dearest Marge: . . ."

After a short but bloody skirmish, Joe regained possession of the letter, which by now showed signs of considerable hard usage. Hank goaded the vic into action again with "Drumboogie," bouncing a lacrosse ball in time with the music. Joe stared wildly about for a moment, then ripped a page from his notebook and scribbled feverishly.

"MARGE:—

We are having a prom here the 7th of

FRIDAY FEB. 25

But why are we HERE?

"A la gare!"

Ugh!

"Ringleaders"

"Get in, Angie"

The end of a perfect day

June. Can you come? Please let me know soon, as I have to buy the tickets. As ever, JOE"

With convulsive gestures he stuffed the letter into an envelope, sealed it, and scrawled the address. He found a stamp clinging to an old jar of jam in his drawer and stuck it on the envelope upside down. "There, by golly, that ought to get her." He sighed and turned as the lacrosse ball sailed over his head. "Verily, Hank my boy, Love is a wonderful thing."

Finis

Marge did come to the Prom, and Joe had a wonderful time, as much of it as he could remember. Afterwards, when his parents had come up for Graduation, he began feeling rather misty and nostalgic. When he went back to his room, just before Graduation to finish packing, he suddenly felt moved to write a poem, so he sat down at his deserted desk and did.

After he had finished, he read it over slowly, grinning to himself.

Coming back in the Fall and seeing all the Preps made our mouths water for the taste of Prepping that would be ours in one more year. Being upper middlers had a certain appeal; and to have lasted three years was no mean achievement.

After the previous two years of smashing victories over Exeter in football, it was something of a disappointment to lose to the Red and Gray in both soccer and football. We had to wait until the Winter Term to chalk up a win against them. Although sports were interesting, studies were of paramount importance. A few of us remembered there was a war on.

The Winter Term saw a good deal more action than in the Fall. Dunc Mauran left early in January for the infantry; a little later Dap Dunn and Fred Alford headed for the Army Air Corps. This was also the term of the A-E war bond drive, to the victory in which, the Uppers contributed not a little.

Our time was equally divided between dicking, Charlie Chaplin, studying, and Terry and The Pirates. Seriously, the possibility of draft, V-12, Air Corps, and whether we would finish school sobered us immensely. We began to realize the gravity of the War; our own probable participation in it made us aware of how important these last few civilian years really were. The more prominent Upper clubs which came into being were: the A-One-O Club, the Bennies, the Beavers, the FAG Club, and the Tail Gunners' Society.

Prospects for the Spring Term make it almost certain that it will be even better than the other two. Spring is always the best term at Andover. The interdormitory softball league will obviously be won by the Uppers. We are looking forward too, to next year, when not only the privileges, but also the responsibilities of Seniors will be ours.

Returning to the hill last Fall, we, the Class of 1946, fully realized that we had graduated from the ranks of "lowly" Juniors to a position of some importance on the campus. The Preps suffered the tormenting of our class, especially, since we retained fresh in our memories the treatment which we had received last year. Little did we realize at that time that out of this number of Preps in our class, several would soon become prominent members of the school, as well as of the Lower Class.

For the first day most of us toiled almost as hard as the Preps, transporting our own furniture from Rockwell or Will Hall to our widely scattered Lower houses. Victrolas, newly allowed us, were used at first to the fullest extent, and consequently "dick" sessions appeared at the most peculiar times. During these conferences almost everything was discussed, including, to be sure, the success of our classmates, O. J. Anderson, and C. Smith, who were earning their Varsity Football letters. This freedom we enjoyed, was too much for some of us, and the faculty soon had the Class of '46 labeled as rather mischievous. We were sure, however, that we had the finest group of boys on the Hill.

During the winter a rivalry that had broken out between the cottages and Main street was accentuated by a hockey game which the cottages won. However, Main Street took a baseball game from the men of the cottages to even up the competition.

The Spring Term is sure to be full of excitement, with many members of the class on Varsity Teams and many others due to make scholastic records with the prize exams and essays coming up. We are looking forward to becoming upper-classmen next year, a step which will put us a long way from our entry as Juniors, only last year.

Junior Class

COUNCIL MEMBERS AND OFFICERS

Ross, Farrington, Pugh, G. Thompson

The Junior Class started off the Fall Term in somewhat of a daze. We didn't quite realize what was expected of us, but we soon found out. Although we didn't benefit much by carrying chairs and tables around the campus, we did get acquainted with the top floors of Senior Dorms.

The Junior Athletics in the Fall were football and soccer. Mr. Di Clementi supervised these athletics well—especially the body building exercises. The Saxons, paced by Captain Dan Lackey, were the undefeated champions in football. In soccer Thomas's Tigers came out on top. Thomas, F. G. Thompson, and Arnold were outstanding. The Rockwell House-Will Hall football game, played on a cold Thanksgiving Day, was won by Rockwell House. Lackey, Suisman, Wood, and Chapin starred for Rockwell, while Forrest, MacWilliams, Barnes, and Wyman held up the Will Hall team.

The Andover-Exeter football game turned out to be an exciting event. Most Juniors didn't know the true meaning of school spirit until after the game. The vacation which ended the Fall Term was along awaited occasion for the Juniors.

The Winter Term was by far the most unpleasant one. The work was hard and the weather was bad. Although there wasn't a great deal of snow, it was readily made use of when it did come. Will Hall experienced quite a few snowball fights, several of them with Rockwell. For some unknown reason the Junior class attracted a lot of attention from the rest of the school when there was snow on the ground. We found out that some of the upper-classmen have pretty good arms.

We are all looking forward to a successful Spring Term to finish the year. We also hope that the "Open Door" policy will be in effect for everyone on the Hill next Fall.

Time means nothing to the Rivers . . .
from them comes fact,
folklore and the future

THE history of this nation, of this living, changing whole has been told in many ways. But never before has it been told in terms of the rivers that led the first white man in from the sea, opened up the great plains, gave transportation, spawned cities, floated lumber, provided power, raised crops and govern still the life of the country.

The Rivers have been here since before man, red or white, arrived and they will be here after he is gone. Men follow them, work them, and live on, with and by means of them. The Rivers tell our story, always in the present tense, because time means nothing to a river.

The Rivers. Merely to call their names is music and achievement and power to an American:

*The Red, The Powder, The Tennessee
The Allegheny, The Mohawk, The Missouri
The Ohio, The Illinois, The Kaw, The Suwannee
The James, The Brandywine, The Colorado
The Kennebec, The Connecticut, The Sacramento
The Arkansas, The Wabash, The Kentucky,
The Hudson, The Charles
The St. Lawrence, The Housatonic, The Grand
The Green, The Yellow and the greatest of all—
The Mississippi*

In them is fact, folklore, legend—that past that is part of us and always with us—the past that made us what we are—three dimensional, to be felt and known and heard and seen and put together.

Poets, historians, writers — such men as Robert P. Tristram Coffin, Carl Carmer, Henry Seidel Canby, and many others—have found their inspiration in these Rivers, made them their specialties. In the growing series, Rivers of America, these men have recorded for us the living history of America, what we are now, and what we will be.

LIFE SAVER . . . Once again blood plasma is used to save the life of a wounded Marine. Scene is an advanced aid station where a difficult operation was performed by Naval doctors and corpsmen. Loss of blood necessitated the use of plasma. This occurred during the fighting on Bougainville in the South Pacific.

We Know Our Under-grads

THE UNDER-GRADS OF NEW ENGLAND KNOW US

There is a bond of good will that exists between Kennedy's and the smart young men of New England. Our many years of experience in satisfying their demands for their special kind of clothes . . . the right styles at the right time . . . have given us a place in their wardrobe planning that we are indeed proud to have. And parents are just as enthusiastic in their approval of prices which are geared to the times.

"PRIME MOVERS"
of fighting Americans

In this fast-moving war "gittin' thar fustest with the mostest" depends upon thousands of motor-driven units of transportation—such as the prime mover truck, the landing barge and the transport plane.

On the critical home front Greyhound buses are prime movers of fighting Americans, too—carrying millions of passengers in uniform, in working slacks and jumpers, and in plain civilian clothes. And with victory, Greyhound will serve increasingly as prime movers for Americans at peace.
